30 KILLED AS BIG SHIP SPLITS

Many City Churches Plan Services For Christmas

The beautiful story of the birth of Christ will be observed in many Circleville churches with special worship services Christmas Eve and Christmas Day.

In each of the churches observing services special Christmas music will be the guiding theme, along with sermons of adoration.

Many churches of the city will not have services on Christmas Eve or Christmas Day.

Those churches who are not having special services presented special programs last Sunday for their congregations depicting the birth of Christ in music, plays, pageants and sermons.

Churches planning the special rites Wednesday evening and Thursday are as follow:

ST. PHILIP'S

Annual Christmas Eve service for St. Philip's Episcopal church will begin at 11:30 p. m. Wednesday with special music by the church choir.

Guest minister for the service will be the Rev. MacDonald of Columbus.

ST. JOSEPH'S

Traditional midnight Mass will be celebrated at Midnight Wednesday in St. Joseph's Catholic church.

St. Joseph's choir will present 15 minutes of Christmas hymns in English prior to Mass, then file by in processional for Blessing of the Crib.

Msgr. George O. Mason, pastor of the parish, will be Celebrant for the Mass, assisted by Fr. Francis Connor as Deacon and Fr. John Soltis as sub-Deacon. Msgr. Mason will present the sermon for the solemn high Mass.

Youths of the church assisting in the service will be John Good, master of ceremony; Everett Thomas, Thurifer; Paul Good, cross-bearer; and Richard Mason and Robert Barnhart, Acolytes.

A Christmas Mass featuring hymns by the Children's choir will be held at 8:30 a. m. Thursday, with the final Mass at 9 a. m. Thursday.

CHURCH OF BRETHREN

Regular prayer service at 7:30 p. m. Wednesday.

PILGRIM HOLINESS

Regular prayer meeting at 7:30 p. m. Thursday.

CALVARY EUB

Members of Calvary Evangelical United Brethren church will join in a Christmas Eve candle-light service from 7:30 p. m. until 9 p. m. Wednesday.

The service will begin with the playing of Christmas carols from the church tower, after which the congregation will sing Christmas carols "Joy To The World" and "Hark, The Herald Angels Sing."

After prayer by one of the members of the Congregation, they will again sing using the carol "Silent Night." Miss Minnie Wilkerson will play the offertory, and a solo, "O Holy Night," will then be sung by Miss Patricia Young.

The Christmas story will then be presented by means of pictures as the colored film, "O Holy Night," with sound recordings will be shown. This story will begin back with the prophecy of Isaiah and with the use of scripture to tell of the event which lead up to and the story of the birth of Jesus Christ.

At the close of this presentation, the Senior Choir will sing "Gloria In Excelsis Deo." The service will then be closed by the benediction by the Rev. James Herbst.

Decorating committee of the church will have the church decorated in the Christmas theme, and much of the service will be held by candlelight. The public is invited to join in this service.

FIRST METHODIST

Members of First Methodist church will celebrate their third annual Christmas Eve candlelight service at 9 p. m. Wednesday.

The service will be divided into

Circleville Ready To Take Plunge Into Annual Christmas Holiday

Virtually all business, industry and everyday activities in Circleville will come to a standstill Thursday in observance of Christmas Day.

And most business employes will get off to an early start for the holiday by ending work early Wednesday.

First of the normal activities to be halted is schoolwork. Circleville schools, along with Wayne and Washington Township schools, were to have closed Tuesday afternoon.

Even before that, Jackson, Ashville and Darby of the county system closed for the holiday last Friday. Remainder of the county schools are to close Wednesday.

• • •

PUBLIC office workers and employes of Circleville library will be next in line to close operations. City and county offices and the library are to close at noon Wednesday to give their workers the longer holiday.

And Circleville merchants will send their tired, hard-worked employes home at about 5:30 p. m. Wednesday after the hectic Christmas buying rush. Most stores remained open during the final days leading up to Christmas until 9 p. m. to accomodate hordes of shoppers.

Most industry here is expected to close its operations later Wednesday as the Christmas hour approaches.

Circleville postal workers who have been sagging from heavy loads of Yule mail are expected to begin their holiday at about 6 p. m. Wednesday.

However, the postoffice will not be officially closed until the last Christmas parcel and package has been handled and the mailroom is bare.

Only a few gasoline stations and possibly some restaurants will be in operation Thursday to handle the needs of Christmas travellers. Amusement workers also will be on the job.

And city police and firemen will work their regular "tricks" during the holiday, although off-duty coworkers probably will fill in at about the noon hour so their buddies can enjoy Christmas dinner at home.

• • •

MENUS FOR Pickaway County's Children's Home, the Infirmary, Berger hospital and the county jail indicate persons spending the holiday there will have good eating.

Turkey will be the main dish at the Home, Infirmary and hospital, while those unfortunate enough to be in the county lock-up will eat "lower on the hog"—they will settle for chicken.

City jail prisoners will have "potluck" for the day, although Mayor Ed Amey indicated anyone who gets in jail for Christmas will have a speedy trial and be on his way if at all possible.

And employes of The Circleville Herald after publishing Wednesday will join the rest of the community in observing the holiday. No paper will be published on Christmas Day.

Convicts Dig 12 Tons Dirt To Flee Pen

WALLA WALLA, Wash. (AP)—Six tough, patient convicts who scooped up 12 tons of dirt in boring a 200-foot tunnel under the Washington State Prison walls were hunted throughout the Pacific Northwest today.

Seven made the spectacular escape early Monday. One, Ralph Courser, 45, sentenced in Seattle on a robbery charge last July, was wounded and captured in Portland, Ore., six hours later.

The hunt centered in the Portland area, where police believed at least three other escapees headed with Courser in a car stolen from Walla Walla. Courser was alone when he was spotted by Portland police, who shot him in the neck as he tried to flee foot.

Authorities at the penitentiary said the escapees must have worked for months digging out the dirt a cupful or handful at a time.

The tunnel, about 15 inches in diameter, began in an ash pit near the prison powerhouse and came out near a guards' tower on the north wall. The dirt was scattered each day with the ashes and carted away. The entrance was beneath steel plates used in the ash pit.

Herald Presents Its Yule Edition

Here is The Circleville Herald's annual Christmas edition.

This special Yule edition of 24 pages is crammed full of best wishes for a Merry Christmas from local businessmen to all readers.

Contained also are schedules of special worship services for many churches of the city, a roundup of the closing preparations of city stores, industries, schools and public offices; and much background and interesting features of the traditional Christmas celebration.

Final pre-Christmas edition of The Herald will be published Wednesday, but employes of The Herald will join with the rest of the community on Christmas Day in observing the holiday.

The Circleville Herald and its staff joins with its advertisers in wishing all of its readers a very MERRY CHRISTMAS.

Mig Downed As Sabrejets Fight Duel

SEOUL (AP)—Another Russian-built Mig jet fighter was shot down as four Allied Sabre jets clashed with eight Red planes.

The fight, at 45,000 feet, was the only one reported today.

Air Force and Marine planes struck at a troop concentration area in Northwest Korea near Chaeryong. Other planes poured bombs on the east airfield at the Red capital, Pyongyang. Pilots reported the Reds were trying to repair the strip.

Communist troop and supply centers near Pyongyang were hit Monday night by Superforts.

Allied raids and Chinese probes led to short engagements along the frozen, snow-covered battlefront. On the western front, an Allied raiding party sent about 80 Chinese fleeing through an artillery and mortar barrage that cut down an estimated 30 Reds.

All the Red probing attacks were beaten off after short fights. The heavily padded Chinese hit near Korangpo in the West, west of Yonchon near Little Nori Hill, north of Yonchon in the White Horse Mountain sector, south of Pyonggang on the Central Front and west of the Mandung Valley in the East.

Mobile church before St. Peter's in Rome.

A GROUP OF NUNS have offered the first mobile church known in Italy to Pope Pius to "bring the house of God" to people on outskirts of Rome. The "bus church" has typical arched windows, a bell and a confessional among other features.

Only Few Short Hours Needed To Complete City's Huge Gift

Maybe—just maybe — Circleville's largest Christmas "present" in history will be ready to put under Santa's tree on Wednesday night, Christmas Eve.

The "present" is a new four-room house for the family of Montford (the Mole) Pollock, left homeless in a fire Dec. 10.

As of Tuesday noon, the huge "gift" was only a few short working hours away from completion. But only a few hours remain until Christmas Day.

A group of about eight workmen converged on the site of the new home behind the ice plant Monday evening and worked until about 10 p. m.

Circleville roofers took over Monday afternoon, covering the house as their part of the Christmas effort. They will be named later.

And workmen on the inside of the house installed much of the ceiling using plasterboard and Firemen Fred Howell and Bern Wolfe completed the chimney.

And nearly half of the outside perimeter of the house has been sided with imitation brick provided by Cussins and Fearn.

Yet needed to finish the house in time for the Pollock family to enjoy Christmas in their own home are:

Completion of the ceiling.

Installation of doors and windows.

Completion of the siding job.

Completion of electric outlets.

And laying a floor of fibre material.

Fire Chief Talmer Wise, who formulated the project of the huge "gift," Tuesday said "it's just possible we'll have the job finished in time for Christmas.

"If some of the boys will turn out Tuesday evening and again Wednesday morning it might be finished by late Wednesday for the Pollocks to move in.

"And if that happens, I'll buy the family a Christmas tree for their new house."

Wise said virtually all of the material needed for the house is at the site now and only hammer-swinging workmen can finish the job now.

Parole Granted

COLUMBUS (AP)—Eugene L. Baker of Van Wert, sentenced to London Prison Farm for non-support, today was granted a parole, effective Jan. 29.

Harrod Soldier Given 3-Year Prison Term

FRANKFURT, Germany (AP)—Pvt. Eugene R. Walters of Harrod, Ohio, was acquitted today on charges of sexually assaulting Mamie Ruth Shelton, 18-year-old American girl, and robbing two soldiers but was sentenced to three years in prison on two minor charges.

A U. S. Army court martial cleared the 31-year-old wounded war veteran on four of the six charges against him. But he was convicted of being absent without leave from his Army post and of wrongfully appropriating an Army jeep and pistol.

The sentence also included dishonorable discharge from the Army. The verdict is subject to review.

The defense counsel, Capt. Flrindo M. De Rosa of Elmhurst, Long Island, N. Y., maintained the evidence "leaves more than reasonable doubt." He claimed that prosecution witnesses had failed to identify Walters positively as the assailant and that the timetable of events the night of the crimes ruled out the possibility of Walters committing them.

Korea Atrocities Probe Promised

U.S. Congress Panel Member Rips Communists For Actions

WASHINGTON (AP) — Rep. Flood (D-Pa) declared today there was "no doubt whatsoever" that the incoming 83rd Congress will approve an investigation of alleged Communist atrocities in Korea.

Flood, a member of a special House committee which has been investigating the Katyn Forest massacre of World War II, said a bill authorizing such an inquiry probably would be introduced immediately after Jan. 3.

Flood's statement followed the report of the Katyn committee, which found a "striking similarity" between the massacre of 15,000 Polish officers in World War II an Communist atrocities against UN troops in Korea.

Flood called the mass murders in the Katyn Forest near Smolensk, Russia, some time after 1940 a "blueprint" for Communist plans to liquidate their enemies on a wholesale scale.

The House committee recommended that the next Congress undertake such an investigation, stating in its report:

• • •

"COMMUNIST tactics being used in Korea are identical to those followed at Katyn."

There was no indication, however, that the committee had evidence of new or recent mistreatment of UN troops or of incidents not reported a year or more ago in the Korea conflict.

The UN Command then put the number of atrocities in Korea at about 8,000.

The committee's report, coming after more than a year's inquiry into the Katyn Forest murders, laid the guilt on Soviet Russia and recommended that the USSR be arraigned before the World Court by the UN General Assembly.

It also asked the President to lay its findings before the UN and for the United States delegation to seek establishment of a UN international commission to investigate "other mass murders and crimes against humanity."

The committee didn't go into procedural details, and there appeared to be no way in which the Katyn massacre could be brought before the World Court. Russia has never accepted the jurisdiction of the court in a case concerning her Without such acceptance, she could not be brought in as a defendant.

Premier Pinay Resigns Post

French Get Another Crisis In Cabinet

PARIS (AP) — President Vincent Auriol today formally accepted the resignation of Premier Antonine Pinay 16 hours after Pinay submitted it.

Pinay, after nine months in office, offered his resignation in a dramatic announcement from the floor of the National Assembly.

He acted after the Catholic Popular Republican Movement, part of his coalition majority, refused to back him in the first of three new confidence votes on a 1953 budget.

Auriol had tried to avoid a Yuletide cabinet crisis by trying to talk Pinay out of resigning. Auriol talked with Pinay early this morning and again this afternoon, but failed to change Pinay's mind. After his morning interview with Pinay he had told reporters:

"My decision is taken. It is not possible to carry such heavy charges and responsibilities without a solid majority."

• • •

AURIOL, AN OLD hand at such crises as this, was unsuccessful in conferences with political leaders to persuade Pinay to carry on, at least until the nation has a balanced budget.

Pinay's decision means the end of the 17th government to hold office since the country was liberated from Nazi occupation in 1944.

It means the end, too, to the "Pinay experiment," which aimed at protecting the purchasing power of the franc by fighting devaluation while rolling back prices wherever possible.

It was a new Pinay attempt to give France a balanced budget for next year which finally broke the government's ranks.

He had posed confidence motions on three financial proposals, but even before the first could be voted, the MRP decided to abstain.

Home Donations Buy Bicycles

Persons who dug down into their pocketbooks for cash gifts to Pickaway County's Children's Home — although many of them remain unidentified—have been notified their donations have been put to good use.

Local residents dug down during the last two weeks to come up with a total of $124 in cash with which youngsters of the Home will enjoy a better, merrier Christmas.

Winfield Koch, Home superintendent, said he has purchased two girls' bicycles and a boys' bicycle with the money, with the cash left over going into Christmas candy.

Koch said the bikes will remain as permanent fixtures at the home, available to any of the kids to ride.

20 Frenzied Persons Leap Into Sea, Die

French Liner Piles Up On Reef After Being Buffeted By Storm

BEIRUT, Lebanon (AP) — Twenty passengers, possessed with fear after 24 hours of buffeting aboard the stricken liner Champollion, died today in a desperate effort to swim ashore through frenzied seas. Fifty others who jumped from the boat made shore safely.

Ten more deaths occurred when a lifeboat capsized, bringing the total of fatalities to 30.

The French liner was aground with a wide split across her middle, on a reef, only 500 yards off shore. Misinterpretation of shore beacons landed her there Monday.

High seas handicapped efforts of small boats to take off those aboard, but gradually the 108 passengers and 220 crew members—less those drowned — were being brought to shore.

In Marseille, the ship's owners said only 40 persons were left aboard the ship.

Three women and a 10-year-old boy were among those succeeding in their attempt to swim to shore.

• • •

THE SEA WAS still as rough as it was Monday when the liner went aground on its voyage from Marseille to Beirut.

The first small craft able to nudge alongside the stricken liner and take off passengers was Beirut Port's pilot ship. It loaded 15 passengers, mostly women, and headed for harbor four miles away.

About the same time, a small motor launch put out from the surf-pounded beach, successfully made the 500 yards to the grounded and split vessel, and brought back seven passengers. It then turned back for another load.

Three British planes made unsuccessful attempts to fly over the ship and drop a cable to connect the broken vessel with the shore.

The beach was filled with thousands of spectators who watched the rescue of passengers from the pounding surf by members of the fire brigade from Beirut's International Airport.

Earlier the ship's owners, the Messageries Martimes, said in Paris there were 328 persons aboard the ship. Included were 108 pilgrims enroute to the Holy Land for Christmas.

A fierce gale blew the 12,546-ton liner, a 25-year-old veteran of French shipping, on to the reef.

• • •

THE FIERCE seas and surf broke her back and sent a wide crack down her amidships section, splitting her apart.

Messageries Martime officials said that among the passengers, described as mostly French tourists and businessmen, was one American, identified only as Charles Harris. He was believed to be a resident of France.

Immigration Law Goes Into Force Tonight

WASHINGTON (AP)—The nation's new immigration law, which has ploughed a rough sea since its launching three years ago, becomes law at midnight tonight amid signs of fresh storms ahead in the new Congress.

Passed over President Truman's veto and roundly attacked by President-elect Eisenhower, it is called the McCarran-Walter General Immigration Act.

When Congress started working on it in 1949, the legislation was aimed at simplifying the laws which say how foreigners may enter the United States for a visit or to live. The ensuing controversy, still very much alive, has turned up some complex angles.

Particularly assailed has been the section which retains the present system of immigration quotas to other nations, based on the national origins of the U. S. population in 1920.

Truman, in his veto, and congressional opponents objected vigorously to this national origins quota system. They said it give Great Britain, Ireland and Germany the biggest quotas and deliberately discriminates against people from Eastern and Southern Europe and elsewhere.

During the presidential campaign, Eisenhower said a new law "certainly was needed, but with leadership rather than vetoes."

Large Tax Stamp Sale Indicates Heavy Buying

This should be one of the merriest of Christmases for Pickaway County if sales of gifts in apparent quantity and quality is an indicator.

County Treasurer Robert Colville said local merchants converged on his office Monday to purchase huge supplies of sales tax stamps.

Colville said his office sold $3,198 worth of the state sales stamps during the day, representing a potential retail sales total of about $100,000.

"We've had a pretty heavy business this Christmas," Colville said. "Our stamp sales have been running high for this month."

The rush for stamps indicates a much larger buying program than local merchants had anticipated.

Wet Weather Heading For Midwest Area

CHICAGO (AP) — More wet and cloudy weather appeared in prospect today for wide areas in the Midwest and the northeastern part of the country.

Heavy snow hit sections of the mid-continent, with falls measuring more than 12 inches in Nebraska and 11 inches in Kansas.

Snow continued today from Western and Northern Wisconsin to the Dakotas and Eastern Nebraska. There also was light snow in the Central Rockies. The coldest weather was in the snow-covered areas with temperatures below freezing and near zero in some sections.

The first heavy snowfall of the season in Southern New England—two to five inches—turned to sleet and rain Monday night. The snow hit Massachusetts, Maine and New Hampshire.

Rainfall in the Midwest extended from the lower Ohio Valley to Lake Superior with wet weather in prospect for most of the region.

Folklore Legends Lauded By Prof

EL PASO, Tex. (AP)—Dr. Francis L. Utley of Ohio State University says folklore legends could provide a common understanding among all peoples of the world.

Utley, president of the American folklore society, spoke Monday at the society's convention.

Traubel Has No Trouble Pleasing GIs

SEOUL (AP) — Soprano Helen Traubel admitted to some surprise today after turning grand opera loose on American soldiers and getting a foot - stomping, whistling cry for more.

Miss Trauble, Wagner and the American soldier in Korea were all fast friends after two days of concerts. She packed the house.

The Metropolitan Opera star admitted she felt a little fearful about coming to Korea and was "surprised" at the GI reaction to grand opera.

"I'm no Betty Hutton—and she's good—and I was a little worried," Miss Traubel told a soldier audience Monday night after they had brought her back on stage with volleys of whistles, hand-clapping and even a few sophisticated "bravos."

The big-voiced opera star sang in a frigid Seoul theater, where her breath condensed into cold clouds as she hit the high notes.

Once in her opera and concert career, she had been troubled in one place "with bats flying back and forth," she said, but never before had she been able to watch her songs as they came out.

Earlier in the day, the St. Louis opera star had another unusual first in her concert career.

She sang aboard the hospital ship Consolation and could not even seen her accompanist, who was playing a small organ in the far corner of a mess hall.

"I just struck out and sang," she laughed, "And we got together as we went along."

Miss Traubel, in private Mrs. William Bass, toured the wards with her husband, then sang over the ship's loudspeaker system.

She said after seeing the wounded she "sang soft things" —No Wagner.

"It is wonderful what they are doing there," she added, "how they are taking care of the wounded. Those boys are wonderful. I am so glad I came."

Bigotry Blamed For Gotham Riot

14 Injured After 3 Youths Hurl Bomb In Spanish-Dominated Bar

NEW YORK (AP) — Three young bigots, one of whom police said wanted to "show these spics something," discharged a phosphorus bomb in a crowded tavern here early today.

The action touched off events which brought death to one of them and injuries to 14 others. Thirteen of the injured were in the tavern.

A few minutes later, and eignt blocks away, police shot and fatally wounded one of the servicemen, identified as Marine Sgt. James Eugene McDermott, 18. He died in a hospital.

During the chase and scuffle which led to the capture of McDermott and one of his companions, a patrolman allegedly was knifed by McDermot to bring the injured count to 14.

Only three of the 14 injured, including a federal narcotics agent and a second patrolman, both hurt in the blast, were kept in hospitals after treatment.

* * *

POLICE SAID bigotry detonated the violence in an Upper West Side Manhattan area partly inhabited by a large number of Puerto Ricans. Eight of those injured in the bar had Spanish names.

The term "spics" is a derogatory word used to describe Americans of Spanish origin.

Officials said the three youths—a sailor in uniform and an airman and a Marine, both in civilian clothes—had been drinking in the bar.

One of the trio pulled out the explosive, a grenade filled with phosphorus. All three then fled in a waiting taxi.

Two off-duty policemen in the vicinity at the time chased the trio to 96th and Broadway, where the Marine and airman were caught. The sailor escaped.

Milk Handlers Get Permit Reminder

Restaurants, food stores and others who sell milk in Circleville were reminded Tuesday that the deadline is near for renewal of their city permits as milk handlers.

The reminder was issued by City Health Director C. O. Leist, who added milk products also come under the regulation. Ice cream and butter are excepted, he said.

New 1953 permits can be obtained at Leist's office at $1 each. The old ones expire New Year's eve.

Leist said similar permits must be obtained or renewed by anyone who keeps hogs inside the city limits.

Ike-Taft Tariff Views Hold Key

WASHINGTON (AP) — Sen. Monroney (D-Okla) predicted today the chances for harmony between President - elect Eisenhower and Sen. Taft (R-Ohio) will get an early test on the issue of U. S. aid to Europe.

Monroney, just back from an overseas tour, said the Europeans' quest for a bigger U. S. market for their goods to replace dollar aid will present "the problem of whether the internationally-minded Eisenhower people can prevail over the Taft people's high protective tariff views."

Army To Trim Draftee Duty

WASHINGTON (AP)—After Jan. 1, Army draftees rotated home from Korea will be released if they have completed at least 20 months of active service, Secretary of the Army Pace announced Monday.

The normal service for draftees is 24 months. The Army previously had said those with active duty in Korea would be released after 21 months, because of that service. The new policy also applies to draftees who return to this country before Jan. 1, if they have not left a reception center for reassignment to a new station by that date.

Memorial Rites Held For Victims

MOSES LAKE, Wash. (AP)—Memorial services were scheduled today for 86 servicemen who died Saturday in aviation's worst disaster.

The rites, in both Protestant and Catholic chapels at Lawson Air Force Base came only a few short hours after a 35-man investigating board ended a marathon night session. Their findings will not be made public until they are forwarded to the Pentagon.

Knox County Hills Yield 'Black Gold'

MOUNT VERNON (AP)—Oil prospectors believe a large pool of "black gold" may lie beneath the hills of Jackson Township in Knox County.

In the last 12 months the drillers have discovered 60 wells out of 72 tries. Thirteen of the wells also produced natural gas. The largest well let go 300 barrels the first day. It stands on a small, old schoolhouse site owned by Walter Hess.

Minette Kicks Herself Right Out Of Grave

BROADSTAIRS, England (AP)—Minette found a hole in the ground she seemed to prefer to her regular habitat as a show pony.

Just how she got there was a mystery, but she was found standing placidly in the quiet of an unoccupied—save for herself—six-foot grave that had been newly dug in St. Peters Cemetery.

The gravedigger couldn't get her to budge and called the fire brigade. They came with ropes, tackle and pulley blocks. One fireman was ingenious. Noting that Minette's flanks were close against the grave walls, he suggested they shovel earth into the pit.

As the dirt fell around her, Minette angrily stamped her hoofs, pounding the earth down and slowly building up the level of the grave floor. Soon she was up to ground level again, and the gravedigger faced the task of shoveling all the dirt out again.

DiSalle Seeking Industry Nod

WASHINGTON (AP) — Michael V. DiSalle, back in the anti-inflation program as economic stabilizer, says industry "should accept its responsibility" and end a boycott of the Wage Stabiliztion Bord.

The seven industry members of the board quit in protest against President Truman's handling of a coal mine wage case. DiSalle, sworn in Monday, said he had asked the U. S. chamber of Commerce and the National Association of Manufacturers to nominate new members. He said he believed industry would return "now that they've made their point."

CLEVELAND (AP) — "Why don't you answer?" the bailiff demanded Monday as the prisoner failed to respond to the name "Will Call."

That's when police discovered they had booked him from a department store instruction note found on a Christmas package.

Glover got a suspended sentence.

Ike Is Still Giving Quiet 'No' To Compulsory FEPC Talks

NEW YORK (AP)—President-elect Eisenhower still is saying what amounts to a quiet "no" to requests that he back legislation to create a fair employment practices commission (FEPC) with enforcement authority.

That explosive issue which split the Democrats in the Truman administration keeps cropping up to confront Eisenhower, but he reportedly is determined it won't cause him trouble.

It came up again Monday when a group of Negro clergymen called at the general's headquarters to ask, among other things, that he "use the authority and influence" of the presidency to bring about:

"The establishment of fair employment legislation which will prohibit the 'starving out' because of color, race or creed those who are otherwise qualified for the jobs they seek."

And what was Eisenhower's reaction to that request?

DR. W. J. Jernagin, spokesman for the delegation of Negroes, told newsmen the President-elect was deeply interested in the problem of hiring-and-firing discrimination against Negroes and other minority groups and said everyone wants to eliminate such discrimination but that there are differences as to the best method.

Eisenhower previously had let it be known he felt the best method was not through legislation, such as President Truman proposed, which would create an FEPC with authority to enforce its rulings.

Shortly after he was nominated last July, another group of Negroes called on Eisenhower in Denver. They also were interested in creation of an FEPC.

The general told that group he wasn't convinced they had the solution. He said he felt much more could be accomplished through educational programs.

Aides report he still feels that way about it, and that he gives no encouragement to those who campaign for "compulsory" legislation.

As he did during the campaign, he pledged in talking to the group Monday that he will name a commission to study problems confronting minority groups in the United States. That commission probably will be appointed shortly after he takes office Jan. 20.

Friend, Judge Keep Ohio GI Out Of Jail

SAN FRANCISCO (AP)—Pvt. Herman Rossi, 20, of Lima, Ohio, has an unknown friend and a kind judge to thank for the fact he won't spend Christmas in jail before shipping overseas.

Rossi was awaiting sentence Monday in municipal court on a charge of kicking in the window of a camera store. Store owner Leo Gold told Judge John J. McMahon:

"Forget the $17.50 the window cost. Make it $10."

A spectator at the rear of the courtroom came forward, silently handed the judge $17.50 and walked out. Judge McMahon handed Gold $10 and then said to Rossi:

"Young man, I suppose you know we usually send you fellows to jail. However, suppose you take this $7.50 and have a good time before you sail. And Merry Christmas."

Rossi said he kicked in the window because he had an "excess of spirits."

Civil Service Group Delays Chief's Case

A meeting of Circleville's Civil Service Commission to "iron out legal points involved" in the controversy surrounding the suspension of Circleville Police Chief William F. McCrady has been postponed until next Monday night.

The commission scheduled a session Monday after the Chief defied a 15-day suspension and announced in a letter that he was "reporting for duty".

However, it was agreed by the commission and counsel for the Chief and Mayor Ed Amey to postpone the deliberations one week.

Prearranged plans relating to the Christmas season were given as reason for putting off the meeting.

Spokesmen for the Civil Service group have definite assurance the session now slated for Dec. 29 will be only for the purpose of untangling legal technicalities. At that session, they explained, a commission hearing for the Chief may be scheduled.

* * *

JOE ADKINS, attorney for McCrady, said the Chief doesn't have to file formal request for such hearing.

"They have to give it to him," he said.

Adkins was also under the impression no hearing will be held next Monday, but he pointed out the plans could be changed later and added:

"We're prepared (for the hearing) whenever they're ready."

Adkins filed a request for lifting of the Chief's suspension during the brief meeting held Monday night. Apparently no other action was taken except to set the new date for Dec. 29.

McCrady's suspension was announced Dec. 15 by the mayor after McCrady allegedly violated a safety department regulation covering the use of city police cruisers.

In declaring the enforced layoff illegal while it still had a week to go, McCrady in his letter claimed the Civil Service group was not notified of his suspension in the manner prescribed by law.

Meanwhile, Mayor Amey earlier announced he plans to hand the Chief another 15-day layoff next Monday for an alleged unauthorized trip to Stoutsville on Dec. 2.

'Anticipation' Gone, DiSalle Says Of Job

WASHINGTON (AP) — Michael V. DiSalle, returning to the government as economic stabilization administrator, likened his swearing-in today to getting married for the third time.

"The original anticipation seems to be gone," DiSalle wisecracked to some 120 officials who saw the oath administered by Mobilization Director Henry H. Fowler in President Truman's news conference room

"But speaking most seriously," the former OPS director went on, "If I didn't believe there was a job to be done here I wouldn't be here.

"If we should demobilize now, the rise in the cost of living might be slow but it would be sure. The inevitable result would be a further devaluation of the dollar."

DiSalle urged his audience, mostly executives of the price, wage and rent agencies he will direct, to "go out and work overtime, if necessary, to do the kind of job that has to be done."

DiSalle said he and the administration were resolved to turn over to President-elect Dwight D. Eisenhower a "functioning and going stabilization program, one we can be proud of," for the new administration to operate—or discard—as it chooses.

Projectionist Is Lauded For Aid In Blaze

PITTSBURGH (AP) — Fire Chief M. F. Schulte of suburban Carnegie credited the 45-year-old projectionist of a theater with averting a disaster during a quick-spreading fire which destroyed a three-story building occupied by the Louisa Theater.

More than 200 patrons, mostly children, were attending a matinee Sunday when John Stanton saw smoke curling from the ceiling He stopped his projection machine, turned on the lights and told the audience:

"There is no reason to be alarmed. Just walk out quickly Don't run. And stay out until we're sure everything is all right."

The fire, which caused damage estimated by Schulte at more than $150,000, gutted the building. The top floors were occupied by bowling alleys.

One of Stanton's four children, Robert, 8, was among the theater patrons. His father's first act, after clearing the theater, was to call home for assurance of his son's safety.

Child Problems and Solutions

By GARRY CLEVELAND MYERS, PhD

Around this time of year many parents are puzzled over the matter of Santa Claus.

They wonder whether it is good for the child to be encouraged to believe in this myth.

Teachers in the early grades are also puzzled. While they prefer to answer the child frankly on questions he may ask about Santa Claus, they are aware that parents may be offended were teachers to disillusion him.

Some teachers get around this problem by suggesting to the child that he direct these questions to his parents.

* * *

BUT, AS teachers and parents are slowly coming to the belief that Santa Claus belongs to the preschool age, this problem is waning to a large extent.

Santa Claus fits into the normal imagination of the young child. Around Old Saint Nick he builds a happy world. To rob him of his belief in Santa Claus would be to take away from him several years of joyous experiences.

Besides, it would make Christmas-time rather drab for his parents, older brothers, sisters and playmates as well.

Consider the fun the older child who "knows" has at keeping the younger one from being disillusioned unduly early. Of course, some older children, awaking to realities about Santa Claus, like to impress younger children with superiority.

Yet in a family of happy understanding and relationships, these older children enjoy co-operating at helping the preschool child continue with his delight in Santa Claus.

When each of our own children grew disillusioned, around the age of six or seven, he was asked whether we should "tell" the next younger child.

"Oh, no!" always came the response, with strong feeling. And the older ones continued to hang up their stockings with the younger and to act out the myth in various other ways as long as he liked it.

But as soon as each child wanted to know if Santa Claus were a real person, we always answered candidly, "No, we have just been pretending that he is," and then we kept on pretending as long as the young inquirer wished.

* * *

WE OBSERVED no evidence of shock in any of our children when disillusioned. On asking each child some years later of his experiences, none indicated that he felt we had deceived him. Many years before these children had families of their own, they said they were going to have Santa Claus for their children.

And all the twelve young grandchildren have experienced Santa Claus as their parents had.

A good way to help the young child gradually to outgrow Santa Claus is to have a few presents for him under the Christmas tree labeled as from real persons along with those marked "From Santa Claus."

We help prepare the young child to get his greatest joy from Santa Claus and we read a great deal to him from folk lore and from other sources that fire his imagination, as we enjoy his yarns of fantasy and appreciate his creations with words and things.

Q. Our son, six, often asks a question which, I am sure, he could answer himself. What should we do then?

A. Don't rebuke him for such a question or tell him he should know the answer. Merely help him to recall certain items you are pretty sure he can, in such a way that he will arrive at the answer to his own question.

Elinor Williams'

Teen Tips

If you see a high school boy with a faraway look in his eyes at this time of year, he's probably not figuring out a math problem or even planning his next Friday night date. He's wondering what to give his favorite date for Christmas.

So let's tackle the "do's" and don'ts" of the problem right now.

First, you can relax, boys. It isn't considered good taste to give your dream girl a big, expensive present. And it's not good manners to give her something to wear unless it's an accessory or a small piece of costume jewelry—not clothes. So that narrows the choice. Here are some suggestions that won't take too much of this month's allowance:—

Accessories — Fluffy white angora mittens, possibly with matching socks. A gay silk or wool scarf. A pretty compact containing face powder, puff and mirror. A "special" lipstick perhaps "jewelled" with sparkly stones (the lip color should be clear red, not too dark). A little evening bag for formal dances—black velvet; gold, silver or white are good choices. A pen or automatic pencil—or both.

Costume jewelery — a necklace of small pearls. A "gold" bracelet with a dangly gold or pearl ornament.

Fall Enrollment Shows Decline In Universities

CINCINNATI (AP)—Fall enrollment dipped slightly in 830 accredited universities and four-year colleges this year, but the drop was less than anticipated and far less than the 1951 decrease.

This was reported in the college enrollment survey of Dr. Raymond Walters, president of the University of Cincinnati, who has issued study results annually since 1919.

Dr. Walters said the 830 colleges reported a total enrollment of 1,293,524 full-time students, a decline of 1.5 per cent from the previous year, and 462,848 part-time students, a decline of 2.8 per cent.

He added, "the full-time decrease is small when contrasted with the 1951 drop of 11.4 per cent from the figures for 950."

The educator said an unexpected upsurge in freshmen enrollment, coupled with upper-class girl students remaining in college, was responsible for the continued high enrollment.

He listed these 10 largest institutions reporting to him: California, 33,770; Illinois, 18,592; Minnesota, 18,406; University of Michigan, 17,008; Ohio State, 16,410; Wisconsin, 15,626; New York University, 15,509; Texas, 13,932; Michigan State College, 12,402; Washington (Seattle), 12,249.

British Artificial Arm Being Lauded

Russell, who lost both hands in World War II, said he would ask Amvets to urge the VA to adopt the British arm.

WASHINGTON (AP) — George Meany, president of the American Federation of Labor, was simply facing up to reality when he said his organization is ready to settle for less than repeal of the Taft-Hartley Act.

Neither Meany nor any other leader of organized labor is in position to insist on wiping out T-H, which was passed over President Truman's veto in 1947 when the Republicans last controlled Congress.

Union leaders now, with the Republicans once again in control, have to settle for the best they can get, which won't be any more than some changes in T-H. They'll have to concentrate on getting the changes they want.

They had given their support in the last election to the Democrats, who had promised repeal of T-H. But the Democrats had promised the same thing in 1948 and couldn't deliver.

And, if they had won this time, they probably could not have delivered either. In recent years, no matter who controlled Congress, organized labor simply did not have enough support among the legislators to kill T-H.

In their 1952 campaign the Republicans didn't promise repeal. They talked only of making changes. Meany expressed confidence that organized labor, through the Republicans, could "get the kind of law we want" by amending T-H.

And that's the most organized labor can expect to see done to the law which was sponsored by Sen. Taft, Ohio Republican, when he was chairman of the Senate Labor Committee in 1947-48.

Judging from the voting records of the labor committee members—all the Democrats and some of the Republicans—it's unlikely any T-H changes would be approved by the committee unpleasing to organized labor.

It's the job of the labor committee to consider proposed changes in T-H and then approve only those it wants. This is not final. The House Labor Committee will make a similar study, and then the full Senate and House have their say.

No matter what changes the committees like the senators and House members on the floor can offer any amendments they want before final vote.

So the kind of changes blessed by the two labor committees could be dropped and entirely different ones substituted on the floor by members less friendly to organized labor than some of the committee members.

Cold Cash May Cure Nation's Ills; Main Blame Laid To U.S. Public

WASHINGTON (AP)—Cold cash appears to be the main prescription of President Truman's special Health Commission for curing the nation's "demonstrable, well-documented health needs."

In reporting such needs last week after a year-long survey, the commission indirectly laid some of the blame at the door of the medical profession.

But it also strongly implied society as a whole is largely responsible for the situation and should bear the brunt of correction—principally by digging deeper into its governmental and private pocketbook.

The criticism of doctors and allied health personnel included allegations that:

1. There are overall organizational deficincies in the way these professional people apply their combined skills;

2. Some doctors are guilty of what the report called such "reprehensible conduct" as fee-splitting;

3. Family doctors and specialists are too often in "isolation" from one another and so do not coordinate their skills for the best good of the patient;

4. The medical profession hasn't made completely adequate provision for the continued, up-to-the-minute education of the family doctor after he sets up practice, although sometimes individual doctors are themselves to blame;

5. The medical schools aren't giving enough emphasis in their general training to matters concerning the physical and emotional development of mothers and children;

6. Annual health examinations of school children are too often performed in perfunctory fashion by school doctors.

But the report implied the heart of the nation's health problem lies outside the health professions themselves—and that its solution lies in the public providing financial support for:

1. Training more doctors, dentists, nurses and other health workers—and encouraging their more equitable distribution throughout the nation.

2. Building more hospitals, particularly in rural and other areas reportedly short in them.

3. Spurring medical research, especially against such things as cancer and mental illness.

4. Putting medical and hospital care on a pre-paid insurance basis for everyone, with federal and state governments teaming up for help people who can't pay for their own insurance or can only pay part of it.

5. Making such a pre-payment system cover all phases of medical and hospital care.

6. Encouraging the organization of doctors and other health workers into team-like "groups" in all parts of the country—a system which the commission contends would go far towards meeting the country's health needs.

As examples of how it contends the nation is presently falling down on the job, the commission cites these:

1. Last year, the total national expenditure for medical research was 180 million dollars—which the commission said was less than the amount spent on building monuments and tombstones.

2. "In rural areas, recipients of public assistance often get second-rate care from the standpoint both of medical science and human dignity. The system of poorly-paid 'county physicians' still in vogue in many parts of the country is a medical shame."

Here is a digest of some of the findings with regard to the nation's health conditions as outlined by the commission:

1. Disabled people: Some two million of the nation's total of disabled people could be placed in employment or more productive work—if there were sufficient rehabilitation programs in effect, employing teams of experts.

2. Chronic diseases: Long-duration ills like cancer, tuberculosis, rheumatism and heart disease account for about 1½ billion dollars in public expenditures annually for medical and hospital services—"yet probably in no other health field is available knowledge so little applied as in the prevention of chronic disease."

3. Mental illness: Half the patients in all the nation's hospitals are people with mental illness, and about half the patients consulting doctors outside hospitals have some kind of an emotional disorder. Yet, knowledge of mental illness of various kinds is still in a "rudimentary" state.

4. Dental disease: There is "shocking evidence" that the American people need more dental care—for example, a lot of people need false teeth before they are 24.

5. Environmental health conditions: Seven million American homes lack running water; one third of the nation's dwellings are overcrowded, lack decent toilet facilities, or are otherwise deficient.

6. Child health: "Enormous gains" have been made in the prevention and cure of disease in children—but "there remain many deficiences in health services to the children of this nation."

Negro Woman Faces Execution

LIVE OAK, Fla. (AP)—Mrs. Ruby McCollum, Negro convicted of slaying a white doctor, has been returned to the Suwannee County Jail to await a ruling on a motion for a new trial.

The widowed mother of three children was convicted Saturday of first degree murder in the slaying of Dr. C. Leroy Adams, whom she declared was the father of her 15-month-old child. The jury, which deliberated a little more than three hours, did not recommend mercy, making the death penalty mandatory.

'Typical' Ohio Factory Aide To Get $4,000

COLUMBUS (AP)—The Ohio State Employment Service today predicted a $4,000 gross annual salary for the "typical" Ohio factory worker in 1953 if he is employed on a year-round basis at present wage rates.

The report issued by William Papier, director of the division of Research and Statistics, said payrolls for Ohio's three million factory workers would reach an all-time high of nine billion dollars this year.

Production workers in the state's factories now gross about $78.40 a week on an average pay scale of $1.88 an hour.

The report said statewide employment continues high but declared there is a labor surplus in Southern and Eastern Ohio Areas with the greatest labor surplus are the Belmont - Harrison - Jefferson County area and the Athens-Hocking County area. Increased unemployment in those areas was blamed on closing of coal mines, lack of defense work and the small industrial growth.

CHRISTMAS EVE

STILL THE CHRISTMAS cards with scenes depict rural life—whether Currier and Ives or Grandma Moses. Snow is an invariable part of the picture. But Americans, on Christmas Eve, whether they live in snow country or not, dwelling in city or country, feel the lovely isolation that comes with deep, feathery snow outside and a blazing hearth within.

It is on Christmas Eve that families withdraw into themselves in the rural spirit of Clement Moore's "A Visit from St. Nicholas." Then it is that the occasion and the celebration of Christmas melt into one warm, simple emotion in our hearts. And with children in the house there can be nothing but blended delight in visions of Santa Claus and the Baby Jesus, arriving simultaneously.

What does a home contain in this Christmas Eve hush—a hush as if snow outdoors muffled all worldly sounds? Most important, of course, is love, the kind Jesus Christ generated for all humanity to feel and act upon if it wished. In Christmas Eve translation it shines in the act of dressing the tree with tinsel and gay baubles.

It is something that clears the heads of a husband and wife who suddenly realize all Christmas shopping is done, all stockings filled, and the turkey is ready for popping into the oven on the morrow. It is something that children, in bed at last, feel to their morrow in a happy glow of security and anticipation.

What if the fireplace is not of a size to accommodate a huge Yule log—or the dining table a roast pig? Be the dwelling large or small, rural or urban, the open-country, snow-outside feeling of Christmas Eve is with us. Here in America tonight, the hush falls.

Merry Christmas!

EVER STRIVING

GIVEN SUFFICIENT time, science may yet catch up with the comics. New hope is seen in the report that physicists at Stanford University are successfully working with an atom smasher using "bullets" which travel almost at the speed of light.

Properly perfected, this device could become a ray gun or a disintegrator of a sort that cartoonists conceived years ago. But there's no telling what science writers may think of by that time.

Justice Frankfurter of the Supreme Court once said a member of that body ought to retire when 70 years of age. His honor is now 70.

George E. Sokolsky's

These Days

I recently attended a meeting of the Yale Political Union Intercollegiate Forum where I heard M. R. Werner deliver a poignant address on the handling of political news in daily newspapers during the recent campaign. Mr. Werner was a supporter of Adlai Stevenson and his general theme was that while the country enjoyed a two party system, it enjoyed a one party press.

Mr. Werner cited examples, principally but not exclusively from the New York City press, to show that Stevenson had not been treated fairly, that by editorials, news slanting, the disposition of space and pictures, Eisenhower had all the advantage.

As I thought it over at leisure, it occurred to me that there are many other sides to that story. Newspapers are no conveyor belts. They have many forms and always have had since the "Spectator" days of Addison and Steele and in this country since John Peter Zenger. The newspapers of Greeley, Bennett, Pulitzer, Raymond, Hearst, and other great figures were personal journals that conveyed the views of their owners with a partisanship altogether unknown today.

If the ownership of a newspaper is to be altogether without views, opinions and decisions, the editorial page should disappear altogether. If the proprietors are to hold no views, why have a variety of newspapers? Why not have one newspaper in each city, one press service for the country supervised by the government?

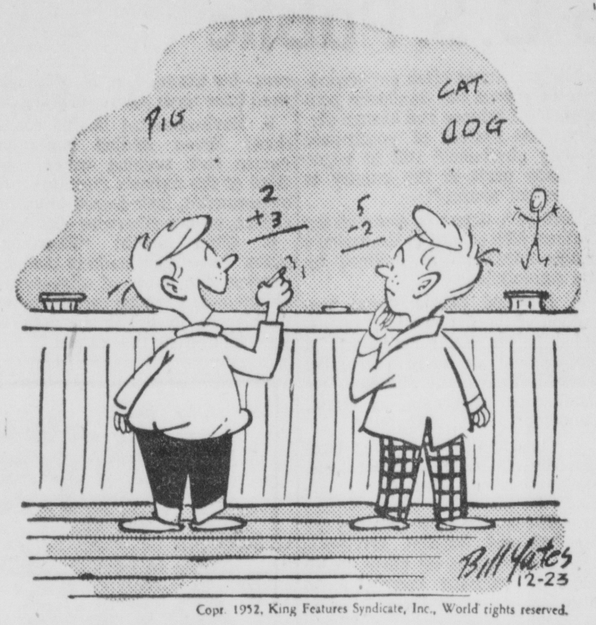

On the other hand, the reader had a right to expect Stevenson's speeches covered as fully as Eisenhower's, and they probably were in the leading newspapers. I have not made such a study as Mr. Werner has, but Stevenson, who was hardly known to most Americans prior to his nomination, has gained a national reputation as one of the best orators this country has produced. He could not have such a reputation were his speeches not printed in newspapers.

Most American newspapers publish columnists who pick up the role of argumentative writing discarded by some editors. Even in cities which have only one newspaper, columnists of varying views are published. Stevenson had more support then Eisenhower among the columnists. It is true that many writers who feel that their reputations depend upon never being wrong, are now covering their tracks by being excessively pro-Eisenhower, but during the campaign, the columnists divided up and the newspapers were able to present both sides in this manner. It is a fallacy to assume that any judgment can be made of newspaper coverage without due regard to the columnists.

After any campaign, there are post mortems. As a Republican, I have lived through them for 20 years. Most of them are wrong. Those of us who were opposed to Roosevelt and Truman used to explain our failures in many ways; yet, we never quite were willing to recognize the simple truth that the American people actually wanted Roosevelt and that nothing we said or proved changed their minds. It may be a discouraging admission for those who are so wise as we are, but the fact does stand so. Furthermore, the reason that many

DIET AND HEALTH

Prompt Treatment Is Important For Child's Migraine Attacks

By HERMAN N. BUNDESEN, M.D.

MOST mothers do not realize that migraine headaches can occur in children as well as adults, although the complaint most often does develop later in life.

If you know someone afflicted with migraine, you may have found out how these severe headaches are dreaded, and how they can disable a person.

When the sufferer is either a child or an adult, there is usually some hereditary background. The child may have a strong tendency toward allergy, while other members of his family may also have migraine.

Attacks Differ

At the same time, the attacks are somewhat different in children. The headaches as a rule become as prolonged and stubborn as they may in adults.

Many adults go without a migraine attack for months. With children, the attacks seem to come very frequently, in many cases as often as two to three times a week.

Usually the child complains of one-sided headaches which are almost unbearable. Before a headache occurs, the child may see spots before the eyes, have a fainting spell, smell a strong odor, or have some other type of warning that an attack is on the way.

Once the attack starts, the headache is severe. Usually the child becomes nauseated and has severe vomiting.

Many of these attacks can be relieved before they even get started with a drug known as ergotamine tartrate, combined with caffeine. Usually a headache can be avoided if the child is given a certain number of the pills as soon as he senses the warning sign of an attack. The drugs known as the antihistamines have also proved helpful in treating this disorder in a number of cases.

Not too infrequently, children suffering from migraine also have convulsions or mild epilepsy. Usually these children respond to small doses of dilantin or phenobarbital, drugs used to prevent convulsions in epilepsy.

Dilantin Helps

It has also been found that many children with migraine who do not respond to other forms of treatment are helped by dilantin, even though they have no convulsions.

Of course, all these drugs must be prescribed by a physician and taken under his careful direction, as the exact dose must be adapted to the patient.

Prompt treatment is also important for a child with migraine headaches. If the condition continues too long untreated, it is much harder to remedy.

QUESTIONS AND ANSWERS

C. M.: Can a wen ever develop into cancer?

Answer: A wen or sebaceous cyst is due to occulsion of the sebaceous gland duct to the skin. It is a cyst filled with an oily-like substance. Usually there is no likelihood of it ever developing into cancer. However, it is unsightly and can easily be removed by surgery.

CHAPTER TWENTY-ONE

BRIAN leaped up, and, pulling Emily to her feet, threw his arms around her and, taking her in a viselike hold, kissed her as she had never been kissed before. It was completely useless for her to struggle for freedom; since she could not escape the embrace, she had no choice but to accept it. When Brian finally released his grip to the extent of holding her at arm's length, he looked down at her with savage joy.

"Now kiss back, darling, and then we'll really get someplace," he said, drawing her toward him again.

"No, we won't. Let me go, Brian. You haven't any right—"

"I've every right. I'm a free man and you're a free woman and I'm so much in love with you that I'm not going to wait for you another day."

"You'll have to."

"And what'll make me, I'd like to know? Not you, my dear. I tell you, all you need is—"

"I will make you. I won't marry you. I can't. I'm in love with someone else."

He gripped her elbows hard. "You say you're in love with someone else. How long has this been going on?"

"In a way, it's been going on for years."

"You mean, before Roger died?"

"Don't look at me that way, Brian. It wasn't—I didn't. . ."

He let go her arms and stood facing her squarely. "And I know you're telling me the truth," he went on. "I know you weren't ever disloyal to him. This other thing you're talking about—it was something you didn't expect, something you didn't even know existed. This other man—does he know how you feel?"

"I think he must. Of course I never told him so. But, before he went away—"

"Before he went away where?"

"Why, he's been in the service, too, Briny. And, before he left Boston—"

"Then he had made love to you? It didn't matter to him that you were married, the way it did to me?"

"Please let me finish, Brian. He had—he'd attempted a little light lovemaking. Nothing like—well, nothing like what you did just now," she added, her color deepening still further. Only one very casual kiss and a few more or less ardent remarks. The sort of thing that used to be called flirtation, I believe. I don't think I was the only woman he kissed casually and talked to that way. I think it was more or less natural for him to do so. I'm sure he was very attractive to women generally, and I suppose that type—"

"Yes. I know all about that type. In fact, we had one in our office." He broke off suddenly. "You don't mean to tell me—" he began. Then he interrupted himself again. "Go on," he said curtly, after a moment's pause.

"Perhaps you don't know as much as you think you do about that type, Brian," Emily said calmly. "Because when this man I'm talking about really had a chance to make all kinds of love to me, when I'm afraid I mightn't have tried to stop him, he didn't do it. He had just as much to do with saving my marriage as I had myself. But before he went away, he did tell me that he loved me. He did say that if things had been different. . . He thought he had a right to say that much. I'm not sure whether he did or not, but I know he thought so. I know he wouldn't have done it unless he had."

"And you didn't hear from him again before Roger died?"

"Never directly. Not once."

"But you've heard from him since?"

"Yes. Naturally he wrote me letters of condolence."

"With his tongue in his cheek!"

"Was your tongue in your cheek when you wrote me after Roger died, Brian? You say you've been in love with me for years too! Please be fair! . . .

"He didn't ask you outright to marry him?"

"Brian, I don't think you have a right to ask for so many details. The letters have been wonderful. They've made me very happy. They've given me something to live for again. Don't you remember, you said yourself you didn't know what would happen to make me feel again that life was worthwhile, but that you knew something would? Well, these letters have. They've made me content to wait. They've raised me to that state of expectancy you talked about."

"And now you've heard that this man's coming home?"

"Yes. I had a letter this morning. He said he wasn't sure yet when he could get here, but sometime this week. He said he'd let me know. He said—oh, Briny, he said he had something very important to tell me, something that couldn't wait any longer!"

Her voice, which at first had been so quiet, then troubled and then calm again, suddenly rang out with gladness. She looked up at Brian with shining eyes.

"I meant to tell you about this today anyhow," she said. "I was all ready to when—when you interrupted me. I wanted you to know that you'd been right, that I did have something worth waiting for. I didn't bring you here to the attic accidentally or casually. I brought you because I knew no one would find us here, because we'd be undisturbed, because I didn't want anyone to break in on us while I was telling you something so important. And I thought after I'd told you, we would have a second drink—just a little one. A—a sort of toast. I didn't dream, you see that you felt the way you did—the way you do. I'm terribly sorry, Brian. I think a lot of you. But I'm not in love with you. I couldn't be. You understand that now, don't you?"

"Yes, I understand that now."

"So of course you don't want to drink the toast? Of course you'd rather go downstairs."

"But of course I do want to drink it! Of course I wouldn't dream of going downstairs until I had."

He leaned over and picked up the two glasses that had been set down on the floor. Then he lifted one of the old hand-blown bottles with the GOOD HOPE label chained about it and poured out the fragrant old rum. This gurgled a little in its flow, and when the glasses were filled, it showed a rich warm color, one that had mellowed with long years and with much voyaging to distant parts of the world. Brian put the old bottle back in its place and, after handing Emily her glass, raised his own.

"I can't toast you personally," he said, "because then you couldn't drink with me and of course that's what I want you to do. So let's drink instead to your married happiness—with a husband who loves you better than anyone else in the world!"

The telegram, anonuncing David's impending arrival, came in the following morning. Emily had not dared look for it so soon, in view of the previous non-committal statement that he would arrive "some day that week." Now she devoured the message with hungry eyes.

HAVE JUST CLEARED THE POST PERIOD CATCHING FIRST POSSIBLE TRAIN TO BOSTON PERIOD EXPECT ME LATE AFTERNOON PERIOD DAVID

"Late afternoon" might mean anything from five onward—possibly from four onward, though Emily decided not to count on that. She had lain awake the greater part of the previous night, trying to map out a tentative plan of action.

It would have been helpful if David had been a little more definite in his letter. It had not said whether he was now about to be separated from the service, or whether he was merely coming home on leave; in the latter case, he would have only about thirty days. But a great deal could be done in thirty days. A great deal could happen—a great many wonderful things. . .

She finally fell asleep thinking of these wonderful things and then, in the morning, came the telegram. Of course that did not enlighten her as to David's plans, any more than the letter had. But there were only a few more hours to wait, before he would talk to her about them. She went downstairs to tell her grandmother that he would be there that afternoon, and Old Mrs. Forbes was delighted to learn of this imminent arrival.

"Have you told that young Irishman David's coming back?" Old Mrs. Forbes inquired.

"Yes. That is, I didn't mention David by name, but I said—"

"You let him know you had other interests. I knew you'd been through some kind of a scene. No doubt he knew to whom you were referring, even if you didn't mention David by name. He must have had some idea how things were in that quarter. And I never thought those two liked each other, particularly."

"No. I'm afraid they didn't."

NATIONAL WHIRLIGIG

news behind the news

By Ray Tucker

WASHINGTON, Dec. 24 — Although Representative Joseph W. Martin Jr., speaker of the House in the next session, favors constructive legislative action instead of endless and time-consuming investigations, Republican leaders on Capitol Hill have decided to keep the congressional spotlight on two winning issues in the recent campaign—communism and corruption.

Although several post-election revelations underlie and justify this decision, GOP strategists have in mind a definite political objective. They hope to utilize forthcoming disclosures of Truman-Acheson delinquencies in these matters to insure Republican control of the executive and legislative branches of the government for many years ahead, possible matching the Democrats' 20-year tenancy at Washington.

• • •

SCANDAL—In short, they aim to capitalize on alleged Democratic tolerance of Commies and crooks in the same way that Roosevelt and Truman, in their five successive Presidential sweeps, exploited Harding's Teapot Dome scandal and the "Hoover depression."

If those relatively minor lapses were good for so many ballot-box victories, the GOP-ers think they can duplicate those successes on the basis of these new and extremely emotional issues.

This exploitation may prove to be politically helpful, if President-elect Eisenhower should be unable to halt or win the current Cold War, or if large-scale conflict should break out between the United States and Russia during his term or terms. It would, in the Republicans' opinion, place the responsibility for such a catastrophe directly on the Democrats.

If this should seem like political fantasy, there is the fact that many GOP orators in the recent campaign pursued this same argument with respect to the events leading to World War II, and to Roosevelt-Truman concessions to Russia before the Communist attack in Korea.

As they put it, the inevitable reaction to wartime and postwar agreements (Yalta, Teheran, Potsdam), as well as to Acheson's policies in the Far East, was the police action in Korea.

• • •

PURSUIT OF REDS—The Republicans now maintain that Capitol Hill's bipartisan pursuit of Communists and fellow-travelers within the Truman and Roosevelt administrations has been vindicated by impartial and nonpolitical bodies. The very men praised and defended by Truman and Acheson have been condemned by grand juries, the United Nations and their own Loyalty Review Board.

The two most distinguished figures—Owen Lattimore and John Carter Vincent—admittedly had great influence in shaping our attitude toward the Nationalist-Communist struggle for possession of China in the postwar period.

Their writings and behavior showed that they were hostile to Chiang Kai-shek, and partial to the Reds. Acheson himself relied heavily on their advice.

• • •

STUPID, INEPT—It may not be possible to prove that they committed any acts of outright disloyalty. As was true of Alger Hiss, Lattimore has been indicted only on the ground that he perjured himself in testifying before the McCarran committee.

But the uncontroverted facts do suggest that they, as well as the high-placed officials who framed Far Eastern policy on the basis of their advice, were inexcusably inept and stupid in one of the major crises of world history.

There is the further fact that the Democrats made the Lattimore affair an official showdown with Capitol Hill critics after Senator McCarthy characterized him as "the Soviet's top agent in the United States." Acheson eulogized him.

A law firm of ex-New Dealers —Abe Fortas, Paul A. Porter and Thurman Arnold — represented him without charge before the Tydings Committee, which handed Lattimore a "whitewash."

Finally, to their current regret, Truman and Democratic orators deliberately condemned Senators McCarthy and McCarran as the "villains" of the recent campaign.

• • •

CONFIDENTIAL — Investigating committees under a Republican administration will have an advantage which they lacked when Truman withheld many so-called confidential files from them. With Eisenhower in the White House, they will have access to military experts' disagreements with the diplomats' appraisal of world conditions, especially in the Far East.

The Republicans, for instance, have never been able to lay hands on a Navy memo which reportedly warned against acceptance of Russian reinforcement in the war against Japan. According to the Navy Board, the Japanese would have been defeated without Stalin's help or use of the atomic bomb. But FDR disregarded this advice, and gave Stalin the territorial concessions that led to the loss of China.

Numerous military recommendations dealing with China have been suppressed, lost or given out in censored form. Top-ranking members of Army and Navy policy-making groups have been forbidden to appear as witnesses before congressional committees.

In short, we may finally get the truth about events that have remade the map and history of the world. It will be a boon to historians as well as to Republican politicians.

1953 Income Tax Data Presented; Aides To Visit Here Jan. 8 And 9

Director of Internal Revenue has released the following information relative to the filing of income tax returns for the year 1952.

Every person who had gross income of $600 or more must file a return. It must be filed between Jan. 1 and March 15, 1953, with the Director of Internal Revenue, Columbus, Ohio.

You may have your tax computed by the director if your income is solely from wages and is under $5000 by filing Form 1040-A. If your income is over $5000 or is from other sources such as self-employment, partnership, rents, etc., you must file on Form 1040, listing your total receipts and expenses.

You may itemize your deductions or you may elect to take the standard deduction. Any balance of tax due must be paid in full with the filing of your return.

• • •

ASSISTANCE in preparing your return can be secured at your local office of the internal revenue department. If you desire help, be sure to bring all information as to income, wages, rents, expenses and deductions, and a copy of your previous year's return.

Form 1040-F, showing income and expenses from farming as well as Schedule "C," showing income and expenses from business, should be prepared by the taxpayer before coming into the office for assistance.

All wage slips received from your employers must be attached to your return, even though no tax was withheld from the wages. Wage earners should wait until all wage statements are received from each place of employment before filing their return, but in no event should the filing of a return be delayed beyond March 15.

Individuals who have filed estimated tax returns for 1952 which are within 80 percent of what their final tax will be and the estimated tax has been paid, may file their final income tax return for the year between Jan. 1 and March 15.

Those who have filed an estimate which will not show at least 80 percent of the tax that will be due and owing on their final 1952 income tax return and paid such an amount to the Director of Internal Revenue must amend their estimates or file their final income tax return Form 1040 in lieu of amending their estimate by Jan. 15.

Farmers may file their estimated tax returns for the year 1952 by January 15, 1953 or file their final income tax return Form 1040 with Schedule 1040-F attached in lieu of the estimate not later than Jan. 31, 1953, paying the tax shown thereon with the filing of the return.

For taxable years beginning after Dec. 31, 1950, a Social Security tax of 2.25 per cent is imposed on individuals having earnings from self-employment. Inasmuch as income from certain occupations, such as farming, physicians, attorneys, etc., are not covered, your instruction booklet should be consulted for the various types of income that are subject to the tax. Self-employment net earnings of at least $400 but not exceeding $3600 are subject to the tax.

Internal Revenue Agents Clay Covey and F.J. Malecky will be in Circleville Postoffice from 8 a. m. until 5 p. m. on Jan. 8 and Jan. 9, to assist Pickaway County taxpayers with the preparation of their returns.

Thug Romantic While He Works

CHICAGO (AP) — One of the two men who held up a chain food store last night mixed a little romance with robbery.

As cashier Mrs. Anne Lidquist, 37, was scooping out bills and silver for one of the robbers, he gave her a resounding kiss.

"Don't be afraid," he smiled, keeping his gun pointed at her. "I won't hurt you."

Anne Baxter Seeks Divorce

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Anne Baxter, Academy Award winner, has startled the film colony by filing suit for divorce from John Hodiak.

In the complaint, filed yesterday, the 29-year-old actress accused Hodiak, 37, of treating her in such a "cruel and inhuman" manner that she suffered "great humiliation, mental anguish and embarrassment."

Silk was used in China in very ancient times, perhaps before 2,640 B.C.

Paul Brown's Movie Setting Scene For Championship Tilt

CLEVELAND (AP) — Coach Paul Brown kept his movie machine whirring overtime today—plotting moves for Sunday's championship game between his Cleveland Browns and the Detroit Lions.

The perfectionist, who gives more attention to detail than a new sergeant at guard mount, uses films of past games in planning upcoming action.

Over and over he runs the pictures, noting what his team did wrong and what actions his opponents took.

What he is seeing—pictures of the 17-6 licking the Lions gave Cleveland earlier this season—does not make him happy.

And—for once—Clevelanders take him seriously when he predicts a grim future. Brown forecasting defeat once was about as convincing as a $3 bill.

For six years, as his mighty gridders galloped over all the opposition in sight, Ohioans got used to victories. Even an occasional loss failed to upset them.

* * *

"THE BROWNS always win the big ones," was the answer.

Well, last year the Browns finally lost a "big one," the championship tilt against Los Angeles. And this season they dropped four games—all of them "big ones"—before finally clutching the American Division pennant in the National League.

So now when Brown says the Lions "have outstanding personnel" he gts a respectful audience. And when he mentions "They beat us last time, you know," the audience all but shudders.

What Brown sees in his movies are Detroit's end Jim Doran and tackle Thurman McGraw roaring through the Brownie line to rush the passing of Otto Graham.

If the Browns are going to win this time, they must find a way to stop that. They also need a defense which will hinder Bobby Layne's throwing and cloister Cloyce Box, the pass-catching end.

Detroit's coach, Buddy Parker, says his team is in "good physical shape" and "we've got a good chance to win."

Connie Mack Sees Chance For A's

FT. MYERS, Fla. (AP) — Connie Mack, on his 90th birthday, predicted the 1953 Philadelphia Athletics will be the best in years.

Of course, he said Monday, the New York Yankees will be tough as usual but he likes the A's chance in the American League race. He added that he thinks it will be the best Athletic team since 1931.

Turner Shows Conditioning In Ring Win

PHILADELPHIA (AP) — Gil Turner's one-sided victory over Joe Miceli Monday night proved one thing: Turner's handlers have learned the art of conditioning.

The Turner who pounded Miceli into a mass of red welts was a well-conditioned fighter strong at the finish as at the start.

The Philadelphia Negro didn't look anything like the fighter who tried to win the welterweight title from Kid Gavilan in the Municipal Stadium here last July. Then he was too light at 144 pounds and drawn and tight looking. He had left his best fight in the gym.

At 149½ pounds Monday night, Turner was as strong as a bull. He took a lot of punishment in the first round from Miceli, the Army private stationed at Camp Kilmer, N. J. He took some strong left and right hands later on. But he came on.

As it happened, it took 58 seconds of the sixth round to complete a walloping job. Now the 22-year-old Turner wants to fight Bobby Dykes, slim Miami, Fla., welter, who holds a split decision over him.

Yanks Moan As Dixie '11' Adds Player

MIAMI, Fla. (AP) — The South's move to add a 26th player to its squad for the Shrine Christmas night charity football game in the Orange Bowl drew a protest today from coaches of the Yankee squad.

South Coach Andy Gustafson of Miami added Randy Broyles of Washington and Lee to his team Monday to replace Oklahoma's Buck McPhail, who missed several practice sessions because of a cold.

"We informed Gus that anyone not in uniform as of last Saturday would be declared ineligible," said North Coach Stu Holcomb of Purdue. "However, we will allow him to use Broyles if he will bench McPhail."

Trainer Joe Greenhut said McPhail will return to practice today and Gustafson said the Oklahoma star will start at fullback, along with All America Jack Scarbath of Maryland at quarterback; Jim Hook of Missouri and Joe Koch of Wake Forest at halfbacks.

The North is a six-point favorite to win the fifth annual all-star contest being played for the Shrine's crippled Children's Hospital fund. The South holds a 3-1 edge in the series.

Bowling Green End Captains All-Ohio Collegiate Outfit

COLUMBUS (AP)—Jim Ladd, fast and sharp Bowling Green end, captains the all-Ohio offensive squad named today in the annual Associated Press selection of all - state teams.

The lad's ability was recognized previously in the nation when he was named on the second team of the Little All-America.

A member of Little America's first team, Al Feeney of Western Reserve, won the captaincy of the defensive All-Ohio squad.

The two teams were selected with the help of 35 coaches and sports writers throughout the state. They split over the choice of an offensive center and so two men are All-Ohio snappers for the first time in the history of the AP's All-State teams. They are Lowell Anderson of Ohio University and John McVay of Miami.

Here is how the 1952 All-Ohio college football team lines up:

Offense—

TACKLES: Don Grammer, Cincinnati, and Chuck Noll, Dayton.

GUARDS: Bill Paul, Heidelberg, and Bill Shalosky, Cincinnati.

BACKS: Gene Rosi, Cincinnati; Bob Stokes, Muskingum; Tom Pagna, Miami, and Fred Durig, Bowling Grene.

Officials Named For Title Game

PHILADELPHIA (AP) — National Football League Commissioner Bert Bell has named the men who will officiate in Sunday's NFL title clash between the Cleveland Browns and the Detroit Lions.

Thomas A. Timlin will referee the game, Samuel (Mike) Wilson will be the umpire, Charlie Brery the head linesman; Lloyd Brazil, field judge, and James H. Hamer, back judge. Bell said the game will be blacked out for TV within 75 miles of Cleveland.

Badgers, Trojans Report Injuries

PASADENA, Calif. (AP) — Wisconsin and Southern California traded Rose Bowl injury stories today, with honors about even.

The Badgers reported that their starting left halfback, Harland Carl, suffered a knee injury in Monday's workout. The Trojans said their two starting guards, Bob Peviani and Box Cox, are unable to practice, Peviani because he has the flu, and Cox because he has a hip joint injury.

LaSalle '5' Still Tops On National Poll

NEW YORK (AP)—Undefeated La Salle of Philadelphia held the No. 1 position in the Associated Press college basketball poll today, but pressure is mounting.

The Explorers return this week end to Madison Square Garden, scene of their National Invitation triumph last winter, to play in the eight-team Holiday Tournament. Against the select field they put their eight-game winning streak in jeopardy.

La Salle opens he ournamen against highly regarded De Paul in one of the afternoon quarterfinal games. Others in the event, ending Tuesday, are Manhattan, Cincinnati, St. John's of Brooklyn, Miami (Ohio), New York University and Utah State.

La Salle won first place in the poll for the second straight week by getting 28 of the 77 first-place votes cast by sportswriters. This gave them 630 points, on the basis of 10 for a first-place vote, 9 for second, etc. They barely shaded Illinois, which had 577 points and 12 first-placd votes.

Others in the top 10 are Seton Hall, Holy Cross, Kansas State, North Carolina State, Washington, Louisiana State, Oklahoma A&M and Western Kentucky.

Famous Statue To Get Cleanup

LONDON (AP)—The famous statue of Eros—winged god of love—that usually stands on tiptoe in the center of London's Piccadilly Circus—will be spending Christmas away from the city's crowds.

Workmen took the statue off its pedestal yesterday and carted him off for a cleanup. They also plan to repair the fountain over which he stands and install a new water system in it before the coronation of Queen Elizabeth II June 2.

Yesterday's Answer

Sokolsky's These Days

Americans failed to vote during the Roosevelt years, was that many could not get themselves to vote for Roosevelt or against him.

Even in those years, there was criticism of the American press for being so wrong about Roosevelt. But the press was not wrong. It is not the function of the press to be on the winning or even the popular side.

If it were, all the press would need to do would be to gauge public opinion and act accordingly like an actor in vaudeville who changes his joke to conform to the tastes of a particular audience.

Some of the greatest men have said the right things at the wrong time and got hissed for it.

For instance, William Jennings Bryan ran three times for the Presidency and was defeated each time; he was Secretary of State under Woodrow Wilson and was ridiculed for his efforts. Yet, his entire program, including the 16 to 1 ratio between silver and gold, was adopted in due course, with some dire results. The man failed, but his ideas persisted.

Newspapers and newspaper men that court popularity by revising their ideas to meet the ebb and flow of public fashion lose their value as instruments of leadership, even if temporarily they may gain in popularity. A free press fights for what it believes to be right.

590 Road Deaths Seen For Holiday

CHICAGO (AP) — Motor travel over the four-day Christmas week end may kill 590 persons, the National Safety Council estimated today.

The estimate covers traffic deaths occurring between 6 p.m. Wednesday and midnight Sunday.

The council cautioned against driving in bad weather and against driving after drinking. It advised those who must drive to start early, take it easy and allow extra driving time for bad weather.

Although many types of insects produce silk, natural silk for making cloth is made exclusively from the cocoons of the mulberry silk moth.

Hoyt Wilhelm Is Top Hurler In National

NEW YORK (AP)—Hoyt Wilhelm, New York Giants' freshman relief hurler and Philadelphia's Robin Roberts copped most of the National League pitching honors according to official statistics released today.

Wilhelm becomes the first rookie in National League history to lead both in earned runs and won-and-lost percentage the same year.

The 29-year - old knuckleballer gave up 43 earned runs in 159 innings for a 2.43 ERA to finish ahead of the 2.58 mark produced by Chicago's Warren Hacker.

The Giants' righthander won 15 games and lost three for a league-leading .833 percentage. He is the 11th NL pitcher to win the earned run and winning percentage titles the same season. The latter crown is based on 15 decisions.

Roberts, who finished third in the earned run race at 2.59, won the most games, 28, the first time a National Leaguer had come up with that many victories since Dizzy Dean of St. Louis chalked up 28 triumphs in 1935.

The hard-working Philadelphia hurler also set the pace in most games started, 37, most complete games, 30 and most innings pitched, 330. He also faced the most batmen, 1,310, and gave up the most hits, 92.

2 Boys Drowned In Akron Pond

AKRON (AP)—Two seven-year-old boys drowned Monday when they crashed through thin ice covering a shallow pond.

Firemen recovered the bodies of Stephen Rohrich and Roger Neill in the pond in the West Hill section after searchers noticed the ice was broken.

2 Persons Killed In Auto Crash

MORROW (AP) — An automobile bearing five Lockland residents plowed into the rear of a parked steel truck on U. S. 22 Monday night, killing two passengers and injuring the other three.

Dead were Arell Lindsey, 38, and Otis Haynes, 25. The accident happened five miles east of here.

Postoffice Digs Way Out Of Mail Avalanche On Schedule

Job Increased By Odd Ways Of Customers

Envelopes Showing Deceased Address Add To Puzzles

Circleville Postmaster A. Hulse Hays indicated late Monday local postal workers feel they're past the full weight of the Christmas rush—but he offered fresh evidence that the mailing public still expects miracles of those who handle the parcels, papers, letters and cards.

The flood of parcels for the Yuletide mail began over a week ago here and was expected to continue heavy "almost up until the last minute," as the forgetful and tardy folks try to beat the deadline.

Figures confirmed, however, that outgoing letters and cards are tapering off from a high point hit last Wednesday.

Strangely enough, the volume of cards mailed from Circleville this Christmastide has been far under last year's estimated total No routine count is made of outgoing parcels.

The city post office handled approximately 280,000 outgoing letters and cards from Dec. 10 to Dec. 22, inclusive, last year. This year, the estimated total for letters and cards over the same period was 249,000, a drop of 31,000.

• • •

"THERE'S NO way to explain it," postal workers said. "Christmas mail figures are always erratic. We don't know why people didn't seem to go heavy on cards this Christmas."

But Postmaster Hays showed several samples of mail that kept his staff workers talking to themselves, even with the letter-card decline.

Leading the list of how-do-you-deliver-this-one classics were a number of letters and cards to Circleville residents who have been dead for some time. One, a special delivery, was addressed to a woman deceased for several years!

Addresses to the living also presented a problem when, as in one case, they read "Mr. and Mrs. Smith, Circleville"—and nothing more.

Or, more in the old hometown friendly spirit, the envelope that was addressed to "Mary and Aunt Alice, Circleville."

"Mary and Aunt Alice," however, were able to have that one delivered through a secret system which the postmaster laughingly declined to explain. He said he discovered it was intended for Mary Heffner of E. Mound St.

A large number of letters and cards never stood a chance at delivery because of hopelessly inadequate addresses, and a surprising number—even considering the Yuletide rush—tried to dodge past without stamps.

• • •

THEN, TOO, some folks tried to use small corners from torn stamps—apparently the result of the great American habit of "stamping cards all at once" while looking the other direction.

Circleville's postmaster pointed out three-quarters of a torn stamp can be approved, but a number of envelopes showed up carrying only the remaining fraction.

One face of the envelope the stamps roamed far and wide, at times moving into the corner intended for the return address. Some, who used one-cent stamps, caused extra work at the post office by stringing them across the top of the envelope through the postmark spot. A clear postmark is required on each envelope, Hays explained.

Decorative seals of reasonable size are permitted on the front of the envelope during December, he added, but at other times they must be placed on the back—and seals on the front rarely make a postal worker happy, even in December.

"High day" for outgoing letters and cards this Christmas, barring an unexpected new record on Tuesday or Wednesday, was Dec. 17 both this year and last—another strange quirk in the Circleville Christmas mail totals. And last Wednesday's drop from the top day for the 1951 Christmas rush reflected the same decline shown by the more complete tally.

Letters and cards on Dec. 17 last year totaled about 50,000. This year's approximate figure for the same "high day" was 33,000.

As for the ebb tide—incoming letters and cards that pack the mailman's pouch along with the smaller parcels—figures can't tell the story nearly as well as a North Court Street carrier who spoke for all his co-workers while climbing a flight of steps downtown.

"The big bunions are growing little ones," he said, "but we're over the hump—I hope."

Tobacco Quotas Favored Strongly

WASHINGTON (AP)—The Agriculture Department reported Monday that official returns on a burley tobacco marketing quota referendum held Nov. 22 show that 98.3 per cent of the growers voting favored such controls.

Accordingly, burley crops for the next three years will be produced and marketed under rigid marketing quotas designed to prevent over-production.

Federal Road Aid To Ohio May Be Lost

COLUMBUS (AP)—A highway department official said Monday Ohio stands to lose $27 million in federal funds for badly needed roads unless it puts up an equal sum.

John Heier, chief planning engineer of the highway department, made the report at a meeting called by Gov. Frank J. Lausche to discuss road financing problems with contractors and the highway user groups.

He said $47 million in federal funds are available to the state but that Ohio has only $20 million in sight next year for matching. Some of the federal money will expire next year unless the state matches it, he added:

"These funds to be utilized," Heier said, "must be matched dollar for dollar through funds available to the state within the required time or the state will lose the unmatched funds."

Heier estimated Ohio will have $16½ million available in 1953 for road construction purposes. Another $3½ million will come in from cities and counties to bring the total to about $20 million.

'White Christmas' Can Only Be Dream For Men In Korea

Famous Song Links Wishes Across Miles

Tragedy Of Struggle Seen Clearest In Yuletide Season

By ED McCANN
Herald Staff Writer

News item—"In Korea, snow is falling tonight."

The small makeshift radio, tucked away with its batteries near the head of one of the two bunks, seemed to be whispering to itself in the darkness.

Then, suddenly, a lighter snapped several times, flared, and cautiously passed its glow to a candle down behind a pile of ammo boxes on the dirt floor of the dugout.

In the weird lighting were etched the tired features of two youthful and dirty faces, silently intent beneath rumped hair and bundled around the chin with blankets that stretched into the gloom on both sides.

Only the eyes of the pair, aside from the restless shadows and the candle's flame, showed motion — hypnotized most of the time by the wobbling light, but turning also to the rickety radio, and a few times in nervous glances toward the other end of the dismal hole atop a Korean ridge.

• • •

FINALLY an arm reached out from one of the blankets toward the radio, accidentally bumping the sandbagged wall and loosening a bit of soil that disturbed the candle.

"See if you can get that other station, Joe. They often have good organ music, and tonight they'll have Christmas Eve music, too."

Joe fingered the dials on the set for a moment in silence. Then he brushed the edge of the blanket away from his mouth and said:

"That's the station we heard mention Pickaway County."

"I don't think it was Pickaway, Joe. You were sitting clear over by the door and I was lots closer—me and that signal fellow. Remember?"

"I heard it clear," Joe said. "It was something about Pickaway County. And he mentioned Circleville, too."

Over in the opposite end of the bunker, canvas hanging in the entrance bulged far inward, waging a constant battle against a bitter gale. Every now and then the howling Winter wind found tiny openings and threw a spray of white inside. The floor around the entrance was white now, and ice on the inside of the canvas glittered in the dim reflected candlelight.

Joe was still trying.

"Keep it low though, Joe. I forgot to tell you that brown-beak from CP was snooping around yesterday while you were helping gather up that medic kid. Said he had strict orders—"

• • •

"YOU MEAN odors," Joe interrupted. "The guy was chicken when we left Frisco and he's still chicken. He'll always be chicken."

"Sure, sure, Joe. You're right. But he said he had strict orders about radios. They blame a radio, you know, for that deal over in Able Company last week. And then when he found our batteries, he started getting sore and—hold it! Don't move your hand!"

"It was only static whining," Joe granted. "Go on, what did brown-beak say?"

"No it wasn't static, Joe. Turn it back to your left, easy—real easy. Listen!"

Joe listened. They both listened. And even the wind for a moment seemed to pause in its struggle at the entrance. Faintly at first but gaining volume the music came. Joe's fingers finally moved to another dial—and then the arm withdrew under his blankets. A girl somewhere—a real girl—was singing:

"I'm dreaming of a white Christmas, just like the ones I used to know. . . ."

"Where do you suppose she's from, Joe?"

"Who knows? Nice, isn't it? I remember the first night I heard it. A bunch of us kids traveled over to a party in Saltcreek. They were giving some of the GI's a sendoff and they played it on a piano and a cute kid sang it. Often wondered what became of her. A little blonde. From Chilli, I think."

"Where the treetops glisten, and children listen to hear sleigh bells in the snow. . . ."

"Ever ride a real sleigh, Joe? Some kids over in Darbyville used to get one out and bring it over to our place. We took it up to Columbus once."

"Darbyville? You know some kids in Darbyville? Ever up around Commercial Point?"

"No—that is, not to stay. An uncle of mine went hunting up that way one Fall and I went along, but we didn't know anybody. Did you ever—hey Joe, better ease it down a little. Satchel told me the last time he stood guard he could hear it down the slope clear as anything."

Joe turned it down.

"I'm dreaming of a white Christmas, with every Christmas card I write. . . ."

"Suppose we'll get any mail, Joe?"

"I dunno. Funny thing, me getting that picture from the girl in Dayton. I swear her place looked just like a farm up near Ringgold. Next time I write I'm going to ask her. Lots of folks from Dayton come over to Pickaway County, huh?"

"Yeah, I guess so, Joe. Maybe."

"May your days be merry and bright—and may all your Christmases be white."

The station faded out and both boys were silent, listening. But the wind had risen again to tussle with the canvas, and snow beat softly against the outside of the entrance covering. Even the candle behind the ammo boxes was fretful—and seemingly tired. Awfully tired, like the eyes that watched its flame dance and flutter above the melting wax.

"Might as well sleep, Joe. It's late, and I don't think she'll sing it again anyway—even if we could get it."

• • •

"LET'S LEAVE it on for awhile in the dark and listen. Maybe it'll come back."

"Okay."

So they snuffed the candle and lay listening in the darkness, nearly all but their ears buried under blankets. Probably an hour or so passed, and over on the other side of the world, in happier lands, Christmas Day was dawning.

By that time—aside from the rustle of the canvas and the moan of the wind — heavy breathing from the two bunks was the only sound.

The little radio set was silent. Silent, that is, until all the sounds of a troubled night finally subsided in reverence for the approach of a mystical morning.

And then, just before the cold gray crept across the Korean mountains—while the forms in the bunks were still and even the heavy canvas hung motionless—the set regained its faint, melodious voice.

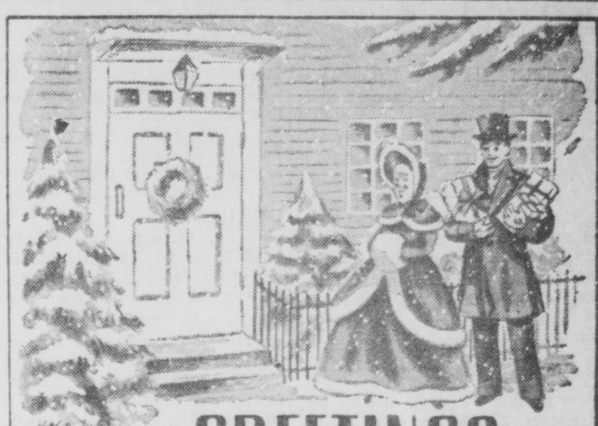

It was almost as though someone far, far away—through some heavenly gift of wish and prayer—had found a way to speak on just that morning to the boys in their sleep. Because sleep they did while another girl—a real girl somewhere—sang softly and with all her heart:

"I'm dreaming of a white Christmas. . . ."

May you and your family enjoy one of the most glorious Yule seasons ever.

Expensive Gear Not Needed For Good Holiday Pictures

Things have been made easier for local residents who want to take indoor pictures of their Christmas trees and family gatherings without having the time or inclination to learn much about photography.

Dwight Radcliff, chairman of the Pumpkin Show Amateur Photography Contest, has offered a few suggestions for the inexperienced.

In addition to his work during the annual Pumpkin Show, young Radcliff serves as official photographer for Pickaway County sheriff's office.

Theme of his advice is that no expensive equipment or elaborate layout is needed to snap pictures during the Christmas festivities—a time that always has experiences that can never come in the same way again.

Radcliff has anticipated several questions which could be asked by inexperienced photographers and lists the answers he would give. Those planning to preserve their holiday fun through interior photographs may follow these tips:

• • •

Q—WHAT general advice can you give for a fellow who just wants to take some indoor pictures during the holidays and doesn't want to spend too much money?

A—If you can borrow a tripod for your camera, use it. Almost invariably it will give you a better picture when the photographer has the time to make a few preparations.

Those taking a picture of their Christmas tree, probably the favorite shot for this season, should get fairly good results by opening the lens of the camera and keeping it open while they count to about five or six. The tree's own lights should be sufficient lighting in most cases.

If no tripod is available for such a picture, I'd suggest the photographer get a flood lamp or two and place them at the side or sides of the camera, throwing the lighting directly onto the object to be photographed. Flood lamps aren't nearly as expensive as many people believe.

The photographer may prefer to get a camera with a flash attachment. There are a number of good flash camera types in the lower price range at the local stores.

In placing flood lamps, care should be taken so that the position of the lamps is not causing glare from the object you're photographing. To check on this, sight at the object from the level of your camera position. A glare that may not show while you're standing erect may be a glare to your camera, placed on tripod or some other solid base to permit the time exposure.

• • •

IF YOU'RE using a flash attachment on your camera, get down at an angle and don't shoot directly into that portion of the object which might cause glare, or reflection. In the case of the flash method, this has to be figured out in advance since the glare won't show until the bulb flashes.

Q—Supposing I'm considering purchase of a camera chiefly because I want Christmas pictures and may not have much use for it except at intervals after the holidays? Is it a good idea to get fairly expensive equipment anyway, with the idea that I may as well get "good pictures while the getting is good?"

A—No. In such a case I'd advise a small, cheap camera with a flash attachment to take the pictures you have in mind at this time. Then it's still good if you want to become interested in photography and, as you continue to learn, you can gradually work into more expensive cameras. Too many people start off with expensive camera and film-developing layouts and then discover they're not interested in photography after all.

Q—Some amateurs fear their flash bulbs will burst in the face of the subject. Do you think there's much danger of this and if so, what can be done about it?

A—I never use a flash guard myself, but it is true the bulbs burst now and then and it can be a serious accident when it happens on a close-up picture. However, I've heard of very few bulbs bursting in this manner. For those who want to feel confident on this point, an inexpensive flash guard can be purchased at the local camera shop. Many bulbs crack in flashing, but very few burst into pieces.

Q—What would you say is the most common mistake made by amateur photographers — the fellows who only use a camera at a time like Christmas or during some similar festivities?

• • •

A—CAMERA movement, which gives that blurred movement to a picture. If you're not using a tripod or something similar for a time exposure—that is, leaving the lens open for a few seconds—be sure to hold the camera as steady as possible. One common practice is to press it against your face while snapping the shutter, or against your body while you hold your breath if it happens to be a type that is sighted in that way. Improper lighting is another frequent fault.

In addition to the way the light is hitting the subject, be sure to have sufficient lighting for a good picture. And many times the light can be misleading, seeming to be enough to your own eye but insufficient for the camera. It's been said that hundreds of pictures are under-exposed (not enough light) for every one that's given too much light. But of course you can go too far either way.

Q—Almost any amateur cameraman knows the disappointment of taking a picture of a person who wears glasses and then finding the lighting happened to "hit them right in the eye". On this detail what's a good precaution?

A—The precaution for this is just about the same as it is for avoiding a shot directly at a surface that can cause glare or reflection. In using a time exposure with house lighting or flood lamps, a careful check can usually avoid this fault before the picture is snapped.

Looking at the subject from your camera position, you'll usually be able to tell whether anyone's glasses are being "hit" square. Changing the light position, or the subject's, should solve this. When using a flash camera, try to shoot at an angle, and from above or below the level of the glasses.

Q—Supposing I'd like to try some color pictures at Christmas time and have little experience in camera work? Or supposing I'm just considering "going in" for photography and would like to start with color shots? Do you see any objection to the idea?

A—I wouldn't advise any beginner to bother with color photography unless he or she has had a good opportunity to learn the art with black-and-white shots. Otherwise it can be too expensive and discouraging for the average person. Also, before you begin taking color photographs I'd advise getting a camera that has a 3.5 lens or better.

Beginners in color work should get a color guide at their camera shop or elsewhere and study the information it gives before pictures are actually taken. Lighting for color is much different than lighting for black-and-white.

South Korea Due To Crawl With Santas Christmas Day

SEOUL (AP)—War - beaten South Korea will be crawling with Santa Clauses Christmas Day. And under each snowy beard there'll be the smile of a United Nations soldier—a tough guy in battle but a softie where kids are concerned.

Thousands of Korean boys and girls are going to get the works Christmas Day — toys, candies and warm clothing.

It appears that the Allied fighting men, in an effort to ease the ache of Christmas loneliness far from home, are planning to make the day one that the Korean youngsters long will remember.

There'll be hundreds of parties for the kids; something will be doing wherever United Nations troops are stationed.

Most of the volunteer Santa Clauses will be U. S. soldiers, but it isn't strictly a U. S. undertaking. The British Commonwealth Division is also remembering the waifs of war with which Korea abounds.

Stacked in tents and quonset huts at almost every Army and Air Force station are thousands of toys. Tough first sergeants are getting into Santa Claus suits and practicing. Oil - stained mechanics are decorating khaki jeeps with wooden reindeer antlers and red bunting.

Privates and colonels are winding up toy trains and automobiles; of course, they on.' sure the toys are in good order.

Since the Korean war started United Nations units have adopted countless children left homeless by the fighting and destruction Soldiers who have seen the heartbreak of war gladly open their pockets to support orphanages all over South Korea. But Christmas calls for something more — something from the heart as well as the pocketbook.

Frontline divisions, engineer outfits, medical units, transportation troops and soldiers and Marines scattered from the front south to Pusan are having parties.

The 11th Marine Regiment adopted a whole village. Every child there will receive a toy and a sweater, bough' by Maj. Robert M Jenkins, Jacksonville, N. C., who was sent to Japan to get them

A U. S. 2nd Division soldier got his hometown of Klamath Falls, Ore., to help out. Sfc. Caydon P. Gwyn, 23, wrote his mother and she went to her church with the problem. As the result about 90 youngsters at the Friendship Home Orphanage near Kapyong will have toys, candy, a full Christmas dinner and plenty of warm clothes.

The 2nd Division built the orphanage, along with others, when it was near Kapyong and saw the plight of the many homeless children.

U. S. 7th Division men are decorating trucks as Santa Claus sleighs and six task forces, each with its dressed-up Santa Claus, is prepared to descend on 14 villages Christmas Day.

These are just a few of the things the service men have planned. Almost every unit, large or small, is helping one way or another. One unit near Seoul has collected a batch of Walt Disney motion picture cartoons to entertain Korean moppets.

Another unit is reported planning parties and gifts of their own for smaller groups.

Gathered pockets in a little girl's dress will puff up nicely after laundering, if you stuff them with clean tissue paper while ironing.

13 FELLOW crewmen aboard a B-29 returning to Okinawa from a bombing mission over Korea can thank Ernest Gorris (above), Glassport, Pa., for the best Christmas present they ever received—he saved their lives and his own. Gorris, 22, defused a live bomb with a 60-second fuse which had lodged in the bomb bay. It took him 28 seconds. In another 32 bomb would have blown plane to smithereens. (International)

Cave Man Really Only Youngster

NEW YORK (AP) — Evidence that ancestors of modern man in Europe are perhaps 35,000 years younger than previously believed was presented to an International Symposium on Anthropology here recently

A new study, based on radioactive carbon content of charred human bones, indicates that the cave man was extinct in Europe by 1,300 B. C. It was presented by Dr Kenneth Page Oakley, geologist of the British Museum of Natural History.

Earlier estimates had placed decline of cave cultures and beginnings of modern European civilization somewhere between 200 and 500 centuries B. C., with most authorities accepting the latter figure as more probable.

Familiar Old Friend Sends Greetings—And Reminder

"Never a Christmas morning,
"Never the old year ends,
"But somebody thinks of someone,
"Old days, old times — old friends."

And that, after all, is the only reason for this piece as churches all over Pickaway County prepare for their Christmas services. The bond that must always live for "old days, old times—old friends."

Many of you have probably never really listened to me, and I know for sure that most of you have never seen me. But at this time of year I've always felt closer to your dreams—wherever you are and whatever you may be doing. I thought it best therefore, at this season, to add one more little greeting and to sign it:

"Just from an old friend who watched you grow, and now wonders where you've gone."

Me? Gee, I'm not important. I'm just an oldtime organ in a little old-fashioned church. And the "where" is even less important. Somewhere perhaps right near you. Perhaps in some other section of the county. Or perhaps beyond, even beyond Ohio—and in maybe a few cases, beyong America's shores as well.

I don't feel backward sending you this note,you see, because I know you well.

When you first went to church alongside the older folks, with your big lace collar or starched little dress and shiny nose, I watched you walk up the middle aisle and hummed a low melody while you were led to a seat with the rest of the family.

Gee whiz, kiddo, you were sort of comical the way you sat up in your seat—straight as a poker and never glancing right or left. Even the sun that played with colors through the window pane seemed to smile as it lit up your hair—combed or brushed as though a surveyor did it with instruments.

You were all a carefree crowd in those days, and I'm afraid you seemed a bit hurried now and then on your way out of services. Nobody frowned though.

They understood, and I—well—I played the marching hymn to give you a break. You probably don't remember.

Maybe you noticed me more though when grade school years passed into the time of high school. You began to pick your own clothes then, I could tell it. And sometimes the boys and girls would walk down the aisle together—both of them so particular about their etiquette that some of the older folks in the choir looked down and smiled, knowing-like.

Then, as the years passed along, I hummed the wedding march for some of the same youngsters who once came to church with their parents, aunts or uncles. They were excited during the wedding to notice how I put in all the mellow trills and followed along softly with the bass. But I didn't mind. I knew.

Some people react funny to weddings. Everybody isn't gay, like you'd think they would be. Relatives and old friends of the bride and groom sometimes get pretty serious before it's over.

Now and then when you grown-up kids would walk back down the aisle between the ribbons and with everybody watching you, I'd get sor of rattled myself. That's when I'd miss a pipe-note or two and the choir members would laugh, nervous like, and say:

"Even the old organ's getting sentimental about it."

But of course that wasn't so. It was just that I needed a bit more wind for a moment or slipped on one of the chords, that was all. "Sentimental?" Bosh!

Then of course there were other days when I hummed only the solemn pieces, and somehow or other people paid more attention to me then.

The church would be hushed except for my melodies and the low voice of the pastor with his requiem. There would be special prayers, and perhaps a draped flag and honor guard. I've seen a good many flags since you were a kid, you know.

Things would seem extra quiet when the folks would file out into the aisle, dressed in black. It wasn't always proper, maybe, but I'd try to hum as loud as I could then. It seemed the best thing to do.

So believe me, you youngster with the grown-up ways—and fancy hair-dos or not as much as you used to have! I've watched you grow through the decades of a life filled with thrilling things. I've sung over old songs in the background while you've turned over and over in your mind the urge of a cherished ambition.

My music has wished you courage when you dropped in at the old church before leaving in brave search of that goal—or just because you couldn't stay.

If you came back, lonesome, dejected and even broken-hearted, I've hummed new hope between the notes of the hymns you always liked the best. And when you returned successful, and admiring friends gathered around you, I've been content to watch from the dim-lit choir loft. And to give a merry lilt to the oldtime numbers picked for the day.

So you see I've tried to be a loyal friend while you've moved ahead to meet life's promises and problems. More than that, I've tried to symbolize for you the very spirit of oldtime friendships — consoling without preaching in times of adversity, giving unselfish praise in the hours of your highest achievements.

"Old days, old times and old friends" are like that, you know. And on Christmas morning, wherever you are, you should remember it.

You shouldn't have to be reminded by the oldtime organ in the little old-fashioned church!

Bacteria Used As Guinea Pigs In Cattle Test

A scientist at Ohio Agricultural Experiment Station is studying animal nutrition by using bacteria as "guinea pigs" in the laboratory.

C. H. Hunt of the station's animal science department said today the bacteria reveal, among other things, the amount of vitamins and proteins they can make available from the feed a cow consumes. If bacteria are unable to make vitamins and proteins available, the feed probably is poor.

"We take a sample of the liquid portion from the cow's rumen, or first stomach," Hunt said, "and place it in an artificial stomach containing good and poor nutritional substances. If the bacteria react favorably, then we know the ration has good possibilities and results can be transferred to the animal laboratory, for further investigation.

"If the bacteria fail to grow, then we know that something is missing. That's where our investigation begins."

• • •

BACTERIA need vitamins, minerals, and proteins to live just as animals do, Hunt said. Their big advantage in the laboratory is that they give answers to testing experiments much faster than rats or other small animals do.

Kept in a test tube at a low temperature, the bacteria cost very little, require less attention. When some are needed in a project, Hunt warms them up in an oven, then suspends them in a salt solution where they are ready to go to work.

One of the big problems in animal nutrition, Hunt said, is to put something in the rumen or first stomach to produce more microorganisms which, in turn, will digest more crude fibre. This digestion produces more vitamins and protein for animals' use.

"That's the secret of getting more milk and meat from our cattle," he said. "Now, laboratory bacteria are pointing the way."

Story Of Santa Claus Is Handed Down Through Sixteen Centuries

By CENTRAL PRESS

Santa Claus in America is a heritage handed down through 16 centuries and by way of many lands.

The good St. Nicholas lived and performed great deeds among the poor in the Holy Land in the Fourth Century A. D. For his works he was consecrated Archbishop of Myra.

Dutch settlers first brought their version of St. Nicholas as connected with Christmas to America.

From a lean and severe theologian, St. Nicholas became a rotund, merry fellow, much more of a human provider of good things than a mitred saint.

His robes of the church and his donkey were traded in the early American concept for fur and red suit and the team of reindeer. In New Amsterdam on the Hudson, the Dutch name Santa Nikolaas was shortened for future Americans to Santa Klaus.

* * *

AT ONCE there was a resemblance between the pictured Santa Claus and the robust Father Knickerbocker. It was cartoonist Thomas Nash who gave Nineteenth Century New York, and the world, its now universally accepted figure of Santa as a white-bearded old fellow in ermine-trimmed, red coat.

In a twinkle he was welcomed as half Father Knickerbocker and half merry King Cole of legend.

For the picture of Santa Claus in words, the world is obligated to Dr. Clement Clarke Moore, who in 1822 was professor of divinity at New York Theological seminary Two nights before Christmas in that year, Dr. Moore told his children of "The Visit of St. Nicholas"

From that night forward, American children have thrilled to the dream of the Christmas Eve arrival of "a miniature sleigh and eight tiny reindeer, with a little old driver so lively and quick."

Dr. Moore's Santa was "dressed all in furs from his head to his foot" as he dropped down the chimney with "a bundle of toys he had flung on his back."

In Dr. Moore's verse "the stockings were hung by the chimney with care," since a legend which is lost in antiquity, had St. Nicholas dropping gold coins down a chimney one night. It so happened that they fell into a stocking which had been left by the fireside to dry.

Gifts, which crowded Santa in "the sleigh full of toys and St. Nicholas, too," naturally came to be a part of the American Christmas through the presents brought by the Wise Men to the infant King in Bethlehem.

And thus, 1,602 years after those first gifts, the toys for American children in 1952 are estimated to run to a value of $400 million.

This year's "space" toys are far different from the gold, frankincense and myrrh offered by the Magi, but the spirit of joy and good tidings remains.

Newer to the American Christmas scene is the greeting card. It first appeared in London in 1846 but it was fathered in this country by Louis Prang of Boston in only 1875. The predictions are that billions of cards will express American Christmas wishes this year. This will be three times the similar exchange in 1931 and will reach a retail sale of $100 million.

Red Guerrillas Losing Ground

KUALA LUMPUR, Malaya (AP) —High Commissioner Sir Gerald Templer told resettled squatters at Temerloh, Pahang state, the battle against Communist guerrillas is taking a turn for the better.

"There are fewer Chinese, Indian and Malay civilians being murdered. We are capturing far more arms and ammunition than we lose. Fewer buses are being burned. There is little interference with the railway, and fewer rubber trees are being slashed," he said.

Requirements Lax To Drive

SOUTHBRIDGE, Mass. — (AP) — South Dakota is the only state that requires no examination, issues no license and sets no legal standard for automobile drivers, according to the 1952 edition of a survey of state requirements for motor vehicle operators All that is required is that the driver be at least 15.

The survey, published by the American Optical Co., says that all other states require licenses and have driver examinations. Age requirements for drivers range from 14 in Arkansas, Idaho, New Mexico, North Dakota, South Carolina and Texas to a high of 17 in New Jersey.

Wounded List Lowers Morale

HONG KONG—(AP) — Communist army morale has been dropping as casualties in Korea increase, reports the independently owned Kung Sheung Daily News.

The paper said Red authorities have isolated wounded soldiers from troops who have never seen Korea. A ban on visitors to army hospitals in Canton has been ordered recently by the commander of the South China military area.

ONCE UPON A CHRISTMAS EVE

By WILLIAM RITT

NOW ESKI, as well as the reindeer are lost, since no one knows the way back to Santa's headquarters. "Bad," says Dasher. "Worse," says Dancer. "Awful," says Prancer. Little Eski is too busy worrying to say anything.

HIGH in the sky the Storm King and Jack Frost look down and see the sad little group. "We ought to help," says the Storm King. "We must help," answers Jack Frost, "and I have an idea how we can do it!"

THE STORM KING shapes one of his snow clouds in the form of a hand, the forefinger pointing in the right direction to Santa Claus Headquarters. All day long Eski and the reindeer follow the sign until it is too dark to see.

JACK FROST twists icicles so that, glittering in the moonlight, they, too, point the way. It's the Day Before the Day Before Christmas. Will they get there in time? Hurry, Eski! Hurry, Reindeer! (To Be Concluded)

Observance Of Christmas Dates Back 1,602 Years To Pope Julius

By CENTRAL PRESS . . .

Christmas Day as celebrated on December 25 in America is a religious heritage traced back 1,602 years to Pope Julius I.

For three centuries after the birth of Jesus there was no one day fixed for the universal observance of the Mass of Christ.

Accordingly, the Roman pontiff ordered an investigation by St. Cyril to determine the day and month of Christ's birth. Pope Julius I, after great deliberation, established December 25 as Christmas beginning in the year 350 A. D.

Foremost sacred symbol of the American Christmas, the creche or lowly manger of the Christ Child, reminds us that on December 25 we are celebrating a birthday.

* * *

THIS YEAR, instead of being the generally imagined 1,952nd birthday of the Saviour, is most likely His 1,956th.

Roman records tell us it was in the year 4 B. C. that Caesar Augustus decreed the whole world should be taxed. Hence it was in that year, rather than in 1 A. D., when Joseph and Mary went to Bethlehem and Christ was born in a stable.

Merry Christmas as the American form of greeting is a reflection of the tidings of great joy handed down to us through the centuries and other languages of the Christian world. Everywhere today the same sentiment is expressed. Good Holidays in Portuguese, Good Christmas in Italian, Merry Yule in Finnish, Good Yule in Swedish, and Joyous Christmas in French.

Thus always a deeply implanted symbol of man's freedom and happy rebirth, Christmas naturally grew to be celebrated in music and song.

The earliest Christmas chants drew on the Bible. "Behold I bring you good tidings of great joy—for unto you is born this day in the city of David a Saviour."

The first carol, as we know this type of Christmas music today, however, is credited to St. Francis of Assisi, who lived at the beginning of the Thirteenth Century.

Martin Luther, 300 years after St. Francis, followed the pattern set by the Roman Catholic church. The Protestant reformer wrote his carol for his children. "Away in a manger, No crib for His bed, The little Lord Jesus lay down His Sweet head."

The Christmas tree as the center of our American festivities is credited by legend to this same Martin Luther.

IT IS definitely traced, however, to Germany in the beginning of the Seventeenth Century, since when its thrilling symbol of Christmas has lasted as a thing of joy for children.

The trimmed tree was introduced into England by the German husband of Queen Victoria a little over 100 years ago. Shortly before that, German immigrants had brought it to America.

A star-studded German night one Christmas Eve, seen by Martin Luther, is the legendary explanation for our custom of hanging candles and lights on our American Christmas trees.

For the large star atop our decorated trees, there is, of course, the symbolic light which guided the Wise Men to the place of the Nativity.

Putting Finish On Beef Gives Higher Profits

Putting finish on beef cattle will pay feeders, an extension economist and a beef cattle specialist in Ohio State University reports.

James H. Warner, extension specialist in animal science, said he has heard comments which indicate some "scare-selling" by feeders. "They may be picking them too green," Warner said.

Mervin G. Smith, extension economist, agreed cattle feeders may be selling because of price weakness. "Low grades have dropped more in price than better grades he pointed out.

The specialists agreed top prices are for well-finished cattle. As downward pressures go to work in the cattle market, the spread in prices between grades becomes greater.

Warner said some cattle are going to market for 28 cents a pound, when the top in Ohio is around 35 cents. The difference in many cases is poor finish.

* * *

SMITH SAID feeders who market cattle without enough finish are hurting themselves in two ways. These cattle will sell at lower grades and bring less money. They also will increase marketings and "beat prices down."

Supply of unfinished cattle is larger and will bring less per pound than finished cattle. Finishing cattle pays, but holding cattle after they are finished will not pay.

A good way to disinfect your vacuum cleaner is to sprinkle some moth crystals over the rugs, and then run the cleaner over them. This will also protect the rugs to some extent from moths.

Beavers Eying The Mississippi

DAVENPORT, Ia. (AP) — Some bold beavers seem to have bitten off more than they can chew in setting out to dam the Mississippi River at Credit Island Park here, naturalists say.

Beavers usually cut small saplings with tender bark for food. And they usually fell big trees only for dams. Since the only thing to dam at Credit Island is the broad Mississippi, naturalists say that must be what the beavers have in mind.

The industrious little animals with the wood-cutter teeth already have felled a number of big trees into the water, some up to three feet in diameter. To save the park's other trees, park employes have daubed the trunks with some stuff that doesn't taste good to beavers.

Jenkins Explains How Santa Feels As Target For Kiddies

Santa Claus has been having such an up-and-down time of it in the five-and-dime store here that well-wishers had to caution him it could take the bulge out of his famous ront.

During a casual check on the jolly old fellow's routine, amid a Saturday afternoon Yuletide shopping rush, he bent over to hear whispered requests about eight times in 30 seconds.

Seeing as how each conference with a little boy or girl requires a bit of private discussion, and how every now and then the huddle requires some coaxing, this is vigorous belt-line exercise.

So much so that the fine old gent from the North Pole has to pause now and then to check his vertebrae for kinks. It was during one of these "breathers" that Don Jenkins, who knows Santa Claus very, very well, explained how it might feel to be the center for countless little questions and the target for bright eyes with a special sparkle.

Santa, of course, saves most of his talking only for those who come from all over Pickaway County and beyond to tell him their hopes for Yuletide morning. But his very good friend, Jenkins, explained it all started here many years ago—this arrangement used in Circleville to have Santa greet his beaming followers.

• • •

AS ALL GOOD boys and girls know, Jenkins explained, Santa Claus gets around awfully fast to keep his many dates, and sometimes a trick reflection makes it look as though he's even two places at the same time—for instance when he's in the five-and-dime and a store down the street has him on a television screen.

Nevertheless the Chamber of Commerce decided long ago (Jenkins himself was about 12 years old at the time) that it was a good idea for Santa to circulate around Court and Main in person, and so he did—wearing a coatt that wasn't so fancy, and a beard that was downright inadequate.

Furthermore, things being like they were in those days, Santa couldn't get all the candy he needed for his friends and had to coax the local candy merchants to furnish a free supply.

At the present time, incidentally, Santa Claus is well supplied with candy for those who come to see him. On days immediately before Christmas, he hopes to be at his regular spot in the five-and-dime from 2 p. m. to 4 p. m. and from 7 p. m. to 9 p. m., except for Wednesday night—Christmas Eve—when the store closes at 6 p. m.

That's the night, as everybody knows, when Santa can't possibly be hanging around five-and-dime stores. There's too much doing in chimneys all over the county, Jenkins explains, and some folks have even made special family arrangements with the jolly gent for that big evening.

Jenkins will be glad to accept all such requests and see that the fine fellow in the big red coat gets each and every one of them. "Already," Jenkins warned, "his list is crowded—but of course he'll be around anyway, if you know what I mean."

• • •

FROM THAT early arrangement with the local Chamber of Commerce Santa continued to feature the pre-Christmas activiy here and about six years ago moved into the five-and-dime. It's been a handy gathering spot ever since.

Ranging from tots hardly able to toddle up to boys and girls in their early teens, children from all over the county these days have been whispering their wishes as fast as the big man can stoop over to listen to them.

"All right, sweetheart" or "All right there, young fellow," the world's annual favorite chuckles at the end of each chat. And the line moves on, bright with the faces of those who waited all year for this one big chance—and grabbed it, along with the candy.

"Many children don't depend on their memory," Santa's friend explained. "They write lists of their own, or have others do it for them and bring it in to make sure everything's noted.

"In the way of toys, the children ask Santa for many things—but probably bikes, cowboy suits, beebee guns, ironing boards and dollies lead the lot of them."

Even as Jenkins spoke a little girl tugged at Santa's pant-leg and said:

"I want two dogs and a ukelele!"

"See what I mean?" Jenkins laughed. "This Santa fellow has to be able to get them all!"

• • •

JENKINS EVEN recalls one particular case Santa told him about when a little girl confided her sister's colt was "going to have a pony" and she wanted a saddle—just to be sure of getting off to a fast start. Advance planning of this sort would be too much for a lot of men, but Santa is able to do lots of things even daddies can't accomplish.

For example, in addition to being at Pickaway County Children's Home and many other places on the nights just before Christmas—including the store on Monday and Tuesday—Santa travels around the local area to let the children know he's in town; and probably to measure his width against the chimneys at the same time. There have been cases, Jenkins said, when the chimney was too narrow or even missing altogether.

In which case, a little advance checking is needed so Santa will know how to get in the door, through a window or by way of the roof. All of which comes under the heading of secret information, of course, since Santa isn't about to tip off how he gets around—even to his pals who might ask him for the information when they see him.

Meanwhile, at the downtown store, the children who have come to know one of life's finest dreams are still waiting for their chance to see the great man.

They come as the neat and clean, the soiled and frayed, the small, the tall, the confident—and even the bashful ones who smile at the floor while whispering the toys they want "mostest."

They come, in fact, as a miniature cross-section of the county and the nation, but in one priceless quality they are bound alike when they shake the hand of Jenkins' good friend, Santa Claus.

In their hearts—at least for that one fleeting moment—is pure happiness based on a full faith in the grown-up world that moves around them. And even for Santa Claus that should convey a tremendous and everlasting responsibility.

Famed Painting Is Hit Stamp

FRANKFURT, Germany (AP)—An Italian masterpiece that is the best known painting in France's Louvre has become West Germany's most popular postage stamp.

Last April postal authorities here issued a 20-pfennig stamp bearing an excellent color reproduction of Leonardo Da Vinci's "Mona Lisa." It was a commemorative issue on the 500th anniversary of the Italian master's birth.

The new stamp caught on at once with philatelists anl already more than a million have been printed. German postal authorities say that collectors throughout the world have written for stamps. England is the biggest customer. There is no limit on the issue and Mona Lisa stamps will be printed according to demand.

Farm Business Expensive Work In Starting Out

Many young men face a greater problem in getting capital to start farming than in making a profit of farming.

Farming is big business and a $76,000 investment is required to operate a 200-acre farm in Ohio.

Returns on a typical, well-operated, western Ohio farm in 1951 would support a land value of about $300 per acre. A 200-acre unit would cost $60,000.

Replacement value of machinery was estimated at $11,000. Livestock and operating capital came to $5,000, making a total investment of $76,000. The farm from which the figures were collected was classified as "cash crop and grain with some livestock."

• • •

AT PRESENT income with good management farmers on units such as this can show a profit.

The problem facing many young men today is not making such a unit profitable, but of securing capital to get started in the farming business.

Farm land and buildings in the United States at present are estimated to be worth $96 billion Last January, the value was about $86 billion, compared to $76 billion at the beginning of the Korean war.

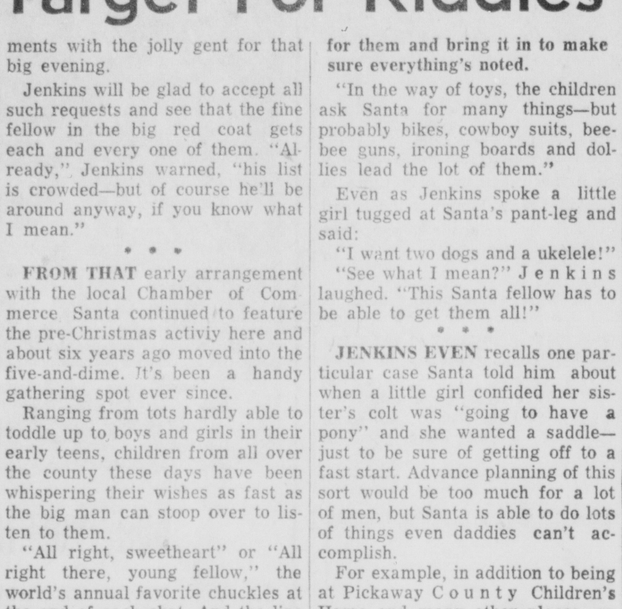

The 28 percent increase in about 2½ years shows the growing investment farmers have in their business.

Thieves Wearing Stripes At Work

BUTTE, Mont.—(AP) — Tavern occupants here thought they were collectively starting to see things as bad as pink elephants when thieves locked them in a rest room after relieving them of $300 to $400.

But after a few excited minutes of conjecture they agreed that the thieves all were dressed in striped overalls.

To remove gloss from woolens, wring a piece of cheesecloth out in water to which a few drops of ammonia have been added. Sponge the fabric thoroughly with long straight sweeps of the arm. Press under a damp cloth.

Santa Claus Cramming His Pack With Toys For Atomic Age Kids

By JEROME DREYER
Central Press Staff Writer

NEW YORK—Santa Claus follows the line that the customer is always right.

So, aiming to please all of the small fry this Christmas season, he is cramming his pack of toys with the favorites of the past along with creations of this Atomic Age.

And there's good news for the assistant Santas, too, according to Norman Wintermantel, president of the Toy Manufacturers of the United States, who declares that, despite the extra play value and quality in this year's $400 million (manufacturers' value) crop of toys, prices are slightly lower than last year's.

Enthusiasm for wild west toys and dress still prevails, but there is a trend toward space-travel gadgets. This year's well-dressed space traveler will carry a space water pistol — 500 shots without refilling —and will wear a Flash Gordon space suit with a radio-antenna hat and magic one-way glasses.

* * *

THIS SPACE phone will permit conversations at a range of half a mile. Finishing his gear will be a space platform with rocket launcher which, in imagination, will get him off to the 'wild blue yonder."

Research among children has revealed that they, like adults, are interested in collecting antiques. This has resulted in a new line of toys in the form of old-time furniture and vehicles in miniature.

Some of these are authentic models of the surrey with the fringe on top, prairie schooners, the early Fords and Stanley Steamers, and complete bedroom sets in early Colonial style complete with an heirloom quilt.

Dolls are more nearly human than ever before. Among the new ones are ingenious creations whose legs move naturally when their arms are held — without a winding device. Others have heart beat mechanisms or drink and burp just like real babies. Still others talk in foreign language via an electronic device.

Another group of dolls, with the latest in style-right hairdos, encourages juvenile interest in grooming.

One model has real hair set in the scalp so it can be washed, combed and set without coming loose. Another's hair appears to grow from a short bob to a waist-length abundance through a winding device concealed in the doll's head.

The ambitious or career-minded child has a wide selection in the new offerings. Aspiring interior decorators can play with a three-dimensional doll house kit and garage which comes ready to assemble, color and furnish with furniture, wall paper, dolls and household pets.

There is a new thrill for the young architect in the modernistic interlocking wooden blocks for constructing the United Nations building and other streamlined structures.

* * *

YOUTHFUL scientists interested in atomic energy can experiment with a small nuclear energy gadget in which the disintegration of atomic particles can be viewed racing at speeds of more than 10,000 miles a second.

Requests for more farm toys have brought a variety of barn sets complete with hog pens, milking enclosures, large silos and a full complement of streamlined agricultural equipment.

For train enthusiasts new accessories include a man putting barrels on a moving belt, which deposits them in a freight car, a switch tower from which a man emerges to flag down motorists, and a two-man hand car with electrically-powered animated figures.

Bits of broken glass, too small to sweep up, may be picked up by blotting the area with damp paper toweling. Glass splinters will quickly adhere to this.

Home Gardeners Can Help Fight Jap Beetles

A possible heavy infestation of Japanese beetles next year might be lightened if home gardeners would follow recommended control measures.

Many gardeners could improve their attempts to get rid of the pests. Failure to use sufficient amounts of insecticides contributes to the lack of control.

Measuring the area to be treated and weighing the materials are more likely to give a gardener positive control of the beetles.

Beetles now can be found in more than 100 areas in Ohio. Eight of these areas are badly infested. More than 2,250 acres in the state are affected.

Better control of beetles in these regions with newer insecticides would help to prevent their spread to non-infested regions.

* *

EXPERIMENTS conducted showed DDT and chlordane much more persistent in soil than lead arsenate. Insecticides sprayed on the soil at the rate of 10 pounds actual chlordane or 25 pounds actual DDT per acre were found to be effective for seven to eight years.

Such insecticides are available in emulsified form and may be applied with little bother. Home gardeners may even use a sprinkling can for applying the insecticide.

Here's a dressed-up version of tomato soup. Into the contents of one can of soup, blend ½ cup sour cream. Add ¾ cup water. If desired, add one or two tablespoons sherry flavoring.

Santa Claus Making His Home In Ohio, Not At The North Pole

By CENTRAL PRESS

CINCINNATI, — Most people will insist Santa Claus lives at the North Pole.

Not so with the children—and the grownups — of Cincinnati, who claim that Santa lives in Rossmoyne, just 12 miles north of here.

And right they might be, for the man they all claim to be Santa Claus looks like him, acts like him, and even works in a toy factory.

The man's name is Everett E. Cook, a hefty 230-pounder with a merry grin who likes to put on his bright red suit, wig and whiskers.

• • •

FOR THE last five years, Cook has been popping in and out of Christmas parties sponsored by fraternal organizations or friends and spreading Christmas cheer to small fry. Although he was opposed to the idea at first, Cook wouldn't miss a chance to play Santa Claus, no matter what the circumstance.

It all started by accident in 1947. The people in the toy plant where he works were making plans for the annual Christmas party for the employes.

Plans were going along well until somebody suggested that it would really be a bang-up party, except that Santa Claus wouldn't be there.

A hurried survey of available people by the committee in charge of arrangements for the party, and Cook was nominated to play the role of the famous gentleman with the gift-full pack on his back.

He was reluctant to act the role, but he finally agreed to rent a costume and be the gift-giver.

When it came time for gifts to be handed out, Cook had a surprise for the people at the party. When they gathered around for their gifts, he announced that only those who would sit on his lap and quietly tell about their Christmas wishes would receive their presents.

Even the president of the Model Toy company, Charley Doepke, had to crawl up on Cook's lap and whisper what he wanted for Christmas.

Cook had so much fun that Christmas that he coaxed his wife into making a Santa Claus suit tor him. To go along with the outfit, he bought a wig and whiskers.

• • •

FROM THEN on he was a full-time Santa Claus during the holiday season, complete with his background as a toy maker at the Model toy plant, the hefty build, and the hearty, happy manner, and the bright red suit.

Since his first appearance as Santa Claus, Cook has assumed the garb more than 70 times, always free, to be the gift giver whenever he is asked.

Cook, who devotes most of his free hours during the holidays to playing Santa Claus, says he would never miss a chance to play the role, no matter what the occasion and the time it would take.

Give it up? Not on his life! Cook claims more fun than the children, and, knowing how they feel about Santa Claus, that's a lot of fun.

'Silent Night' Born In Beauty Matching Its Own Simplicity

By Central Press

High in the Austrian Alps, in the region known as the Tyrol—"the land of the mountains"—is to be found the birthplace of "Silent Night, Holy Night."

Here, the towering Tyrolean peaks, centuries-old and famed for their snow-capped grandeur, rise in lofty simplicity into the cool, clear air, guarding smiling, peaceful valleys.

Far up in these Alpine mountains, where love of music is nature's gift to every child, nestles the town of Oberndorf, Austria.

Here in 1818 lived a devout young Austrian priest named Father Joseph Mohr. With his friend, the village schoolmaster and church organist, Franz Gruber, he was destined to give the world this most famous of all Christmas hymns.

* * *

THE TWO men, both lovers of great music, had often talked of the fact that "the perfect Christmas song had not yet been found." Thinking about it, Mohr sat in his church study on Christmas Eve, 1818. Outside, the hushed silence of the night heightened the snow-covered beauty and stillness of the mountain scene.

The purity and calmness of the high peaks filled his heart with radiant joy as he recalled those first Christmas tidings, "Jesus, The Saviour is born." And the thoughts that had been long forming in his mind suddenly found musical expression in the song which we have come since to know and love as "Silent Night, Holy Night."

The next morning, Christmas Day, Mohr hurried to his friend's home with the manuscript of his precious song. Gruber read it intently and exclaimed, "Friend Mohr, you have found it — the right song—God be praised!"

Gruber, thrilled with the spirit of his friend's verses, set to work to compose the perfect melody for "the perfect song."

Finally, the soft, flowing air we now use came to him. "It sings itself, your song," he cried to the delighted priest. Gruber's real contribution to music lies in the beauty and simplicity of the tune, in its perfect blending with Mohr's verses.

The two men sang the new hymn together, to have it ready for the church devotions that night.

Later in the evening, when the villagers were gathered in the gray little mount church, Mohr and Gruber sang their Christmas song before its first audience.

It touched the listeners deeply, and, after the service, they thanked the two friends with tears of joy in their eyes. A new hymn had been born.

The story of how the song spread from its mountain home in the Tyrol to become one of the Christmas favorites in all parts of the world is an enchanting one. Only very slowly did it come into fame. For nearly a year after its first rendition, the song lay almost forgotten in Gruber's desk.

* * *

THEN, IN November, 1819, the church organ had to be repaired, and the repair man, when he had finished with his work, asked Gruber to play something to test the organ.

The beautiful melody of "Silent Night" came back to Gruber's mind and he played it with all its powerful, yet simple, beauty. So entranced was the organ-builder that he begged to take a copy of the song home with him to his own town across the mountains.

From one music-lover to another the hymn was passed on, till it was without a name and was known simply as "The Tyrolese Song," because it had first come from the Tyrolean Alps. With that title it was printed in 1842 for the first time, 24 years after it had been composed!

From that time on, the song has been put into countless other languages and carried to all parts of the world to become the best loved of all Christmas songs and hymns. It touches a heartfelt need, and to all who hear it, it brings the Saviour's calm and peace in its strains of beauty and joy!

Here's a recipe that calls for leftover mashed potatoes. Mix sliced cooked frankfurters with prepared mustard. Place on sauerkraut in the bottom of a deep casserole Cover with last night's mashed potatoes. Place bits of butter, margarine or bacon drippings on the top and heat in moderate oven until potato topping is browned.

Christmas Story From Revised Bible

(EDITOR'S NOTE: Here is the Christmas story told in the new revised Standard Version of the Bible.)

In those days a decree went out from Caesar Augustus that all the world should be enrolled. This was the first enrollment, when Quirinius was governor of Syria And all went to be enrolled, each to his own city. And Joseph also went up from Galilee, from the city of Nazareth, to Judea, to the city of David, which is called Bethlehem, because he was of the house and lineage of David, to be enrolled with Mary, his betrothed, who was with child. And while they were there, the time came for her to be delivered. And she gave birth to her first-born son and wrapped him in swaddling cloths, and laid him in a manger, because there was no place for them in the inn.

And in that region there were shepherds out in the field, keeping watch over their flock by night. And an angel of the Lord appeared to them, and the glory of the Lord shone around them, and they were filled with fear. And the angel said to them, "Be not afraid; for behold, I bring you good news of a great joy which will come to all the people; for to you is born this day in the city of David a Savior, who is Christ the Lord. And this will be a sign for you: you will find a babe wrapped in swaddling cloths and lying in a manger." And suddenly there was with the angel a multitude of the heavenly host praising God and saying,

"Glory to God in the highest, "and on earth peace among men with whom he is pleased!"

When the angels went away from them into heaven, the shepherds said to one another, "Let us go over to Bethlehem and see this thing that has happened, which the Lord has made known to us." And they went with haste, and found Mary and Joseph and the babe lying in a manger.

Caution Urged On America's Get-Together Holiday

Last Yuletime Resulted In 351 Deaths

Four-Day Vacation For Many Means Heavy Traffic

It's not always fair weather when families get together, so drive carefully on your Christmas trip.

The National Safety Council warns that Christmas is America's family get-together holiday.

That means a lot of travel under hazardous conditions of poor visibility and treacherous road surfaces. That's why the death toll from traffic accidents is greater at Christmas time than for any other holiday of the year.

Heavy travel, tricky weather, early darkness and holiday festivity combined to bring death to 351 persons during the four-day Christmas holiday last year, the Council said.

• • •

MANY PERSONS again will enjoy a four-day holiday this year—long enough to tempt millions of motorists to drive considerable distances for the rendezvous with Santa Claus and a turkey dinner.

"Our records show the traffic death toll for Christmas eve and Christmas day is about twice the annual daily average," says Ned H. Dearborn, Council president. "This calls for special caution on everybody's part—driver and pedestrian alike.

"To keep death from taking your holiday, or someone else's is a simple thing. All that is required is extra caution and courtesy, plus a little more time to be extra careful when driving on the highway or crossing streets.

"If you're walking, watch for traffic—and wait for the green light before crossing streets. Carry packages so they do not obstruct your view. Motorists cannot always see you, especially during early evening darkness.

"If you're driving, start early and take it easy. Be extremely cautious in bad weather and darkness.

'If you imbibe Christmas spirit in liquid form, stay away from the steering wheel of a car. Don't let holiday spirit—or spirits — replace common sense and caution.

"Assume personal responsibility for a safe celebration for yourself and others. Make Christmas happy for everyone.

"Don't let death take your holiday."

Raw Garbage Blamed For Hog Disease

Vesicular exanthema disease among hogs is still on the loose despite drastic control measures in many areas. Quarantines have been slapped on nine counties in five states.

Cause of the continued spread of VE in this:

"Nothing has been done to check the disease at its source. That source is raw garbage.

"There's no way to police every garbage feedyard in the country. Some big feeders sell hogs every market day. When VE is diagnosed in a garbage fed herd, chances are good that affected hogs already have passed through slaughter plants and the fresh pork is on its way to consumers.

• • •

"HOUSEWIVES or hotel cooks throw raw meat rinds and bones from these undetected VE animals into garbage cans, and the disease is on its way to new herds."

The U.S. Livestock Sanitary Association recently emphasized the importance of stopping the feeding of uncooked garbage to hogs. Members of the association were generally agreed that such feeding practices should have been stopped before the disease jumped the California state line and spread to 29 other states in five months.

Recently, quarantines were lifted in three states after strong control measures were enforced. But the raw garbage problem remains.

Raw meat in garbage spreads hog cholera and trichinosis as well as VE. Trichinosis is dangerous to human health. VE is not.

German Bible Dating 1832 Included In Collection Here

Memories will reach back over the years in Pickaway County when the whistles and bells salute the passing of Old 1952, but even the oldest residents won't be able to recall many events traced through a collection of Bibles owned by Dave Walters of Circleville.

Walters, who lives at 111½ E. Water St., has a valuable collection, including one of the oldest Bibles in the county—printed in German and carrying an 1832 copyright mark.

Walters said he knows of one older Bible in Circleville and added he hopes eventually to obtain it.

"It's been promised to me when certain developments come to pass," he said, "but even so I may not be able to get it."

He declined to give the name of the present owner.

• • •

WALTERS SAID the Bible referred to has written entries dating back to the 18th century. Entries made to maintain family histories, he explained, are among the most interesting details to be found in the old Bibles.

His Bible collecting hobby began about five years ago, Walters recalled, and he began it only because Circleville's Trinity Lutheran church had three or four that were to be discarded. His prized 1832 Bible was one of those he obtained at that time from the church pulpit.

Walters said it had been used by the father of the Rev. G. L. Troutman, present pastor of Trinity Lutheran.

The Walters collection now includes about 23 Bibles, several of them printed in German. Many of them are beautiful examples of workmanship and all are bound in leather.

"A cupboard that my wife would like to use for clothes is full of Bibles," he laughed.

Walters has never estimated total value of his Bibles, but agreed they "hold a lot of memories for a lot of people," many of them forgotten to the community and now listed only on the family record pages. Such records frequently trace families back many generations.

• • •

"IN FACT, it's surprising that so many people are willing to give the Bibles up," he said. "Even aside from the satisfaction of having the collection, I find I read the Bibles much oftener because of it—looking through the old books and reading the many notations made for the family histories."

Added to the interest in the Bibles themselves and the family data they usually contain, Walters said he has always enjoyed reading cards, memo slips and forgotten bookmarks in a Bible newly added to his collection.

Between the pages of one he found one of the earliest copies of a Columbus newspaper. And, in another, a school report card told of progress for a pupil who had studied readin', writin' and 'rithmetic "back around 1838 or 1840."

Walters has noticed one important change in the Bibles of modern times.

He said the old Bibles almost without exception included a page for the Temperance Pledge.

"Members of the family would sign the pledge," he said, "and abided by it. But somehow, in a lot of Bibles nowadays, the pledge page isn't included."

Sunken Warship To Be Salvaged

SINGAPORE — (AP) — A salvage company has raised the barnacle and mud-covered hulk of the Japanese ship, Zenya Maru, off Singapore.

The wreck has a large hole in its side big enough to hold three three-ton trucks, Capt. W. A. Doust, general manager of the salvage firm, said. No records exist as to how it was destroyed during the war. The ship will be broken up here and its steel used for building construction.

Prices Steady

Prices farmers receive for products will see no sharp change in 1953, predicted experts at the State-Federal Outlook Conference in Washington, D. C. A Capper's Farmer report on the meeting says farmers received less than a quarter of the $3 billions increase in consumer food bills between 1951 and 1952.

Hormones Used

Virgin heifers and sterile cows can be made to produce milk through the use of sex hormones. Hormones in pellet form are deposited under the skin of the cow's neck. Within four months five tested animals brought into lactation by this method started producing milk. They averaged 350 pounds of butterfat in 10 months and gained an average of 200 pounds in weight.

30 KILLED AS BIG SHIP SPLITS

Many City Churches Plan Services For Christmas

The beautiful story of the birth of Christ will be observed in many Circleville churches with special worship services Christmas Eve and Christmas Day.

In each of the churches observing services special Christmas music will be the guiding theme, along with sermons of adoration.

Many churches of the city will not have services on Christmas Eve or Christmas Day.

Those churches who are not having special services presented special programs last Sunday for their congregations depicting the birth of Christ in music, plays, pageants and sermons.

Churches planning the special rites Wednesday evening and Thursday are as follow:

ST. PHILIP'S

Annual Christmas Eve service for St. Philip's Episcopal church will begin at 11:30 p. m. Wednesday with special music by the church choir.

Guest minister for the service will be the Rev. MacDonald of Columbus.

ST. JOSEPH'S

Traditional midnight Mass will be celebrated at Midnight Wednesday in St. Joseph's Catholic church.

St. Joseph's choir will present 15 minutes of Christmas hymns in English prior to Mass, then file by in processional for Blessing of the Crib.

Msgr. George O. Mason, pastor of the parish, will be Celebrant for the Mass, assisted by Fr. Francis Connor as Deacon and Fr. John Soltis as sub-Deacon. Msgr. Mason will present the sermon for the solemn high Mass.

Youths of the church assisting in the service will be John Good, master of ceremony; Everett Thomas, Thurifer; Paul Good, cross-bearer; and Richard Mason and Robert Barnhart, Acolytes.

A Christmas Mass featuring hymns by the Children's choir will be held at 8:30 a. m. Thursday, with the final Mass at 9 a. m. Thursday.

CHURCH OF BRETHREN

Regular prayer service at 7:30 p. m. Wednesday.

PILGRIM HOLINESS

Regular prayer meeting at 7:30 p. m. Thursday.

CALVARY EUB

Members of Calvary Evangelical United Brethren church will join in a Christmas Eve candle-light service from 7:30 p. m. until 9 p. m. Wednesday.

The service will begin with the playing of Christmas carols from the church tower, after which the congregation will sing Christmas carols "Joy To The World" and "Hark, The Herald Angels Sing."

After prayer by one of the members of the Congregation, they will again sing using the carol "Silent Night." Miss Minnie Wilkerson will play the offertory, and a solo, "O Holy Night," will then be sung by Miss Patricia Young.

The Christmas story will then be presented by means of pictures as the colored film, "O Holy Night," with sound recordings will be shown. This story will begin back with the prophecy of Isaiah and with the use of scripture to tell of the event which lead up to and the story of the birth of Jesus Christ.

At the close of this presentation, the Senior Choir will sing "Gloria In Excelsis Deo." The service will then be closed by the benediction by the Rev. James Herbst.

Decorating committee of the church will have the church decorated in the Christmas theme, and much of the service will be held by candlelight. The public is invited to join in this service.

FIRST METHODIST

Members of First Methodist church will celebrate their third annual Christmas Eve candlelight service at 9 p. m. Wednesday.

The service will be divided into

Circleville Ready To Take Plunge Into Annual Christmas Holiday

Virtually all business, industry and everyday activities in Circleville will come to a standstill Thursday in observance of Christmas Day.

And most business employes will get off to an early start for the holiday by ending work early Wednesday.

First of the normal activities to be halted is schoolwork. Circleville schools, along with Wayne and Washington Township schools, were to have closed Tuesday afternoon.

Even before that, Jackson, Ashville and Darby of the county system closed for the holiday last Friday. Remainder of the county schools are to close Wednesday.

• • •

PUBLIC office workers and employes of Circleville library will be next in line to close operations. City and county offices and the library are to close at noon Wednesday to give their workers the longer holiday.

And Circleville merchants will send their tired, hard-worked employes home at about 5:30 p. m. Wednesday after the hectic Christmas buying rush. Most stores remained open during the final days leading up to Christmas until 9 p. m. to accomodate hordes of shoppers.

Most industry here is expected to close its operations later Wednesday as the Christmas hour approaches.

Circleville postal workers who have been sagging from heavy loads of Yule mail are expected to begin their holiday at about 6 p. m. Wednesday.

However, the postoffice will not be officially closed until the last Christmas parcel and package has been handled and the mailroom is bare.

Only a few gasoline stations and possibly some restaurants will be in operation Thursday to handle the needs of Christmas travellers. Amusement workers also will be on the job.

And city police and firemen will work their regular "tricks" during the holiday, although off-duty coworkers probably will fill in at about the noon hour so their buddies can enjoy Christmas dinner at home.

• • •

MENUS FOR Pickaway County's Children's Home, the Infirmary, Berger hospital and the county jail indicate persons spending the holiday there will have good eating.

Turkey will be the main dish at the Home, Infirmary and hospital, while those unfortunate enough to be in the county lock-up will eat "lower on the hog"—they will settle for chicken.

City jail prisoners will have "potluck" for the day, although Mayor Ed Amey indicated anyone who gets in jail for Christmas will have a speedy trial and be on his way if at all possible.

And employes of The Circleville Herald after publishing Wednesday will join the rest of the community in observing the holiday. No paper will be published on Christmas Day.

Convicts Dig 12 Tons Dirt To Flee Pen

WALLA WALLA, Wash. (AP)—Six tough, patient convicts who scooped up 12 tons of dirt in boring a 200-foot tunnel under the Washington State Prison walls were hunted throughout the Pacific Northwest today.

Seven made the spectacular escape early Monday. One, Ralph Courser, 45, sentenced in Seattle on a robbery charge last July, was wounded and captured in Portland, Ore., six hours later.

The hunt centered in the Portland area, where police believed at least three other escapees headed with Courser in a car stolen from Walla Walla. Courser was alone when he was spotted by Portland police, who shot him in the neck as he tried to flee foot.

Authorities at the penitentiary said the escapees must have worked for months digging out the dirt a cupful or handful at a time.

The tunnel, about 15 inches in diameter, began in an ash pit near the prison powerhouse and came out near a guards' tower on the north wall. The dirt was scattered each day with the ashes and carted away. The entrance was beneath steel plates used in the ash pit.

Herald Presents Its Yule Edition

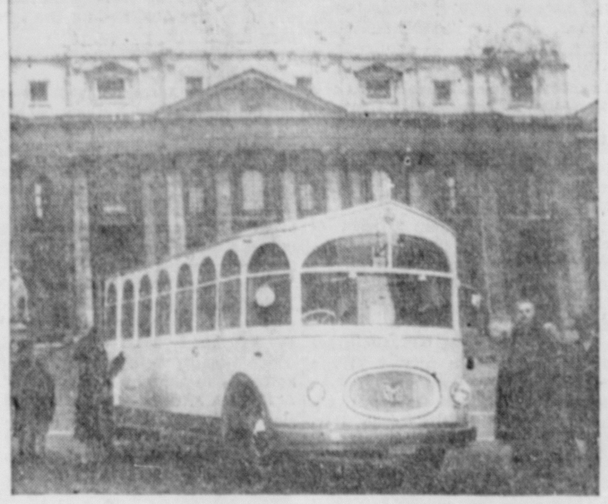

Here is The Circleville Herald's annual Christmas edition.

This special Yule edition of 24 pages is crammed full of best wishes for a Merry Christmas from local businessmen to all readers.

Contained also are schedules of special worship services for many churches of the city, a roundup of the closing preparations of city stores, industries, schools and public offices; and much background and interesting features of the traditional Christmas celebration.

Final pre-Christmas edition of The Herald will be published Wednesday, but employes of The Herald will join with the rest of the community on Christmas Day in observing the holiday.

The Circleville Herald and its staff joins with its advertisers in wishing all of its readers a very MERRY CHRISTMAS.

Mobile church before St. Peter's in Rome.

A GROUP OF NUNS have offered the first mobile church known in Italy to Pope Pius to "bring the house of God" to people on outskirts of Rome. The "bus church" has typical arched windows, a bell and a confessional among other features.

Only Few Short Hours Needed To Complete City's Huge Gift

Maybe—just maybe — Circleville's largest Christmas "present" in history will be ready to put under Santa's tree on Wednesday night, Christmas Eve.

The "present" is a new four-room house for the family of Montford (the Mole) Pollock, left homeless in a fire Dec. 10.

As of Tuesday noon, the huge "gift" was only a few short working hours away from completion. But only a few hours remain until Christmas Day.

A group of about eight workmen converged on the site of the new home behind the ice plant Monday evening and worked until about 10 p. m.

Circleville roofers took over Monday afternoon, covering the house as their part of the Christmas effort. They will be named later.

And workmen on the inside of the house installed much of the ceiling using plasterboard and Firemen Fred Howell and Bern Wolfe completed the chimney.

And nearly half of the outside perimeter of the house has been sided with imitation brick provided by Cussins and Fearn.

Yet needed to finish the house in time for the Pollock family to enjoy Christmas in their own home are:

Completion of the ceiling.

Installation of doors and windows.

Completion of the siding job.

Completion of electric outlets.

And laying a floor of fibre material.

Fire Chief Talmer Wise, who formulated the project of the huge "gift," Tuesday said "it's just possible we'll have the job finished in time for Christmas.

"If some of the boys will turn out Tuesday evening and again Wednesday morning it might be finished by late Wednesday for the Pollocks to move in.

"And if that happens, I'll buy the family a Christmas tree for their new house."

Wise said virtually all of the material needed for the house is at the site now and only hammer-swinging workmen can finish the job now.

Mig Downed As Sabrejets Fight Duel

SEOUL (AP)—Another Russian-built Mig jet fighter was shot down as four Allied Sabre jets clashed with eight Red planes.

The fight, at 45,000 feet, was the only one reported today.

Air Force and Marine planes struck at a troop concentration area in Northwest Korea near Chaeryong. Other planes poured bombs on the east airfield at the Red capital, Pyongyang. Pilots reported the Reds were trying to repair the strip.

Communist troop and supply centers near Pyongyang were hit Monday night by Superforts.

Allied raids and Chinese probes led to short engagements along the frozen, snow-covered battlefront. On the western front, an Allied raiding party sent about 80 Chinese fleeing through an artillery and mortar barrage that cut down an estimated 30 Reds.

All the Red probing attacks were beaten off after short fights. The heavily padded Chinese hit near Korangpo in the West, west of Yonchon near Little Nori Hill, north of Yonchon in the White Horse Mountain sector, south of Pyonggang on the Central Front and west of the Mandung Valley in the East.

Parole Granted

COLUMBUS (AP)—Eugene L. Baker of Van Wert, sentenced to London Prison Farm for non-support, today was granted a parole, effective Jan. 29.

Harrod Soldier Given 3-Year Prison Term

FRANKFURT, Germany (AP)—Pvt. Eugene R. Walters of Harrod, Ohio, was acquitted today on charges of sexually assaulting Mamie Ruth Shelton, 18-year-old American girl, and robbing two soldiers but was sentenced to three years in prison on two minor charges.

A U. S. Army court martial cleared the 31-year-old wounded war veteran on four of the six charges against him. But he was convicted of being absent without leave from his Army post and of wrongfully appropriating an Army jeep and pistol.

The sentence also included dishonorable discharge from the Army. The verdict is subject to review.

The defense counsel, Capt. Flrindo M. De Rosa of Elmhurst, Long Island, N. Y., maintained the evidence "leaves more than reasonable doubt." He claimed that prosecution witnesses had failed to identify Walters positively as the assailant and that the timetable of events the night of the crimes ruled out the possibility of Walters committing them.

Korea Atrocities Probe Promised

U.S. Congress Panel Member Rips Communists For Actions

WASHINGTON (AP) — Rep. Flood (D-Pa) declared today there was "no doubt whatsoever" that the incoming 83rd Congress will approve an investigation of alleged Communist atrocities in Korea.

Flood, a member of a special House committee which has been investigating the Katyn Forest massacre of World War II, said a bill authorizing such an inquiry probably would be introduced immediately after Jan. 3.

Flood's statement followed the report of the Katyn committee, which found a "striking similarity" between the massacre of 15,000 Polish officers in World War II an. Communist atrocities against UN troops in Korea.

Flood called the mass murders in the Katyn Forest near Smolensk, Russia, some time after 1940 a "blueprint" for Communist plans to liquidate their enemies on a wholesale scale.

The House committee recommended that the next Congress undertake such an investigation, stating in its report:

• • •

"COMMUNIST tactics being used in Korea are identical to those followed at Katyn."

There was no indication, however, that the committee had evidence of new or recent mistreatment of UN troops or of incidents not reported a year or more ago in the Korea conflict.

The UN Command then put the number of atrocities in Korea at about 8,000.

The committee's report, coming after more than a year's inquiry into the Katyn Forest murders, laid the guilt on Soviet Russia and recommended that the USSR be arraigned before the World Court by the UN General Assembly.

It also asked the President to lay its findings before the UN and for the United States delegation to seek establishment of a UN international commission to investigate "other mass murders and crimes against humanity."

The committee didn't go into procedural details, and there appeared to be no way in which the Katyn massacre could be brought before the World Court. Russia has never accepted the jurisdiction of the court in a case concerning her Without such acceptance, she could not be brought in as a defendant.

Premier Pinay Resigns Post

French Get Another Crisis In Cabinet

PARIS (AP) — President Vincent Auriol today formally accepted the resignation of Premier Antonine Pinay 16 hours after Pinay submitted it.

Pinay, after nine months in office, offered his resignation in a dramatic announcement from the floor of the National Assembly.

He acted after the Catholic Popular Republican Movement, part of his coalition majority, refused to back him in the first of three new confidence votes on a 1953 budget.

Auriol had tried to avoid a Yuletide cabinet crisis by trying to talk Pinay out of resigning. Auriol talked with Pinay early this morning and again this afternoon, but failed to change Pinay's mind. After his morning interview with Pinay he had told reporters:

"My decision is taken. It is not possible to carry such heavy charges and responsibilities without a solid majority."

• • •

AURIOL, AN OLD hand at such crises as this, was unsuccessful in conferences with political leaders to persuade Pinay to carry on, at least until the nation has a balanced budget.

Pinay's decision means the end of the 17th government to hold office since the country was liberated from Nazi occupation in 1944.

It means the end, too, to the "Pinay experiment," which aimed at protecting the purchasing power of the franc by fighting devaluation while rolling back prices wherever possible.

It was a new Pinay attempt to give France a balanced budget for next year which finally broke the government's ranks.

He had posed confidence motions on three financial proposals, but even before the first could be voted, the MRP decided to abstain.

Home Donations Buy Bicycles

Persons who dug down into their pocketbooks for cash gifts to Pickaway County's Children's Home — although many of them remain unidentified—have been notified their donations have been put to good use.

Local residents dug down during the last two weeks to come up with a total of $124 in cash with which youngsters of the Home will enjoy a better, merrier Christmas.

Winfield Koch, Home superintendent, said he has purchased two girls' bicycles and a boys' bicycle with the money, with the cash left over going into Christmas candy.

Koch said the bikes will remain as permanent fixtures at the home, available to any of the kids to ride.

Immigration Law Goes Into Force Tonight

WASHINGTON (AP)—The nation's new immigration law, which has ploughed a rough sea since its launching three years ago, becomes law at midnight tonight amid signs of fresh storms ahead in the new Congress.

Passed over President Truman's veto and roundly attacked by President-elect Eisenhower, it is called the McCarran-Walter General Immigration Act.

When Congress started working on it in 1949, the legislation was aimed at simplifying the laws which say how foreigners may enter the United States for a visit or to live. The ensuing controversy, still very much alive, has turned up some complex angles.

Particularly assailed has been the section which retains the present system of immigration quotas to other nations, based on the national origins of the U. S. population in 1920.

Truman, in his veto, and congressional opponents objected vigorously to this national origins quota system. They said it give Great Britain, Ireland and Germany the biggest quotas and deliberately discriminates against people from Eastern and Southern Europe and elsewhere.

During the presidential campaign, Eisenhower said a new law "certainly was needed, but with leadership rather than vetoes."

Large Tax Stamp Sale Indicates Heavy Buying

This should be one of the merriest of Christmases for Pickaway County if sales of gifts in apparent quantity and quality is an indicator.

County Treasurer Robert Colville said local merchants converged on his office Monday to purchase huge supplies of sales tax stamps.

Colville said his office sold $3,198 worth of the state sales stamps during the day, representing a potential retail sales total of about $100,000.

"We've had a pretty heavy business this Christmas," Colville said. "Our stamp sales have been running high for this month."

The rush for stamps indicates a much larger buying program than local merchants had anticipated.

20 Frenzied Persons Leap Into Sea, Die

French Liner Piles Up On Reef After Being Buffeted By Storm

BEIRUT, Lebanon (AP) — Twenty passengers, possessed with fear after 24 hours of buffeting aboard th. stricken liner Champollion, died today in a desperate effort to swim ashore through frenzied seas. Fifty others who jumped from the boat made shore safely.

Ten more deaths occurred when a lifeboat capsized, bringing the total of fatalities to 30.

The French liner was aground with a wide split across her middle, on a reef, only 500 yards off shore. Misinterpretation of shore beacons landed her there Monday.

High seas handicapped efforts of small boats to take off those aboard, but gradually the 108 passengers and 220 crew members—less those drowned — were being brought to shore.

In Marseille, the ship's owners said only 40 persons were left aboard the ship.

Three women and a 10-year-old boy were among those succeeding in their attempt to swim to shore.

• • •

THE SEA WAS still as rough as it was Monday when the liner went aground on its voyage from Marseille to Beirut.

The first small craft able to nudge alongside the stricken liner and take off passengers was Beirut Port's pilot ship. It loaded 15 passengers, mostly women, and headed for harbor four miles away.

About the same time, a small motor launch put out from the surf-pounded beach, successfully made the 500 yards to the grounded and split vessel, and brought back seven passengers. It then turned back for another load.

Three British planes made unsuccessful attempts to fly over the ship and drop a cable to connect the broken vessel with the shore.

The beach was filled with thousands of spectators who watched the rescue of passengers from the pounding surf by members of the fire brigade from Beirut's International Airport.

Earlier the ship's owners, the Messageries Martimes, said in Paris there were 328 persons aboard the ship. Included were 108 pilgrims enroute to the Holy Land for Christmas.

A fierce gale blew the 12,546-ton liner, a 25-year-old veteran of French shipping, on to the reef.

• • •

THE FIERCE seas and surf broke her back and sent a wide crack down her amidships section, splitting her apart.

Messageries Martime officials said that among the passengers, described as mostly French tourists and businessmen, was one American, identified only as Charles Harris. He was believed to be a resident of France.

Wet Weather Heading For Midwest Area

CHICAGO (AP) — More wet and cloudy weather appeared in prospect today for wide areas in the Midwest and the northeastern part of the country.

Heavy snow hit sections of the mid-continent, with falls measuring more than 12 inches in Nebraska and 11 inches in Kansas.

Snow continued today from Western and Northern Wisconsin to the Dakotas and Eastern Nebraska. There also was light snow in the Central Rockies. The coldest weather was in the snow-covered areas with temperatures below freezing and near zero in some sections.

The first heavy snowfall of the season in Southern New England—two to five inches—turned to sleet and rain Monday night. The snow hit Massachusetts, Maine and New Hampshire.

Rainfall in the Midwest extended from the lower Ohio Valley to Lake Superior with wet weather in prospect for most of the region.

Folklore Legends Lauded By Prof

Utley, president of the American folklore society, spoke Monday at the society's convention.

Traubel Has No Trouble Pleasing GIs

SEOUL (AP) — Soprano Helen Traubel admitted to some surprise today after turning grand opera loose on American soldiers and getting a foot - stomping, whistling cry for more.

Miss Traubel, Wagner and the American soldier in Korea were all fast friends after two days of concerts. She packed the house.

The Metropolitan Opera star admitted she felt a little fearful about coming to Korea and was "surprised" at the GI reaction to grand opera.

"I'm no Betty Hutton—and she's good—and I was a little worried," Miss Traubel told a soldier audience Monday night after they had brought her back on stage with volleys of whistles, hand-clapping and even a few sophisticated "bravos."

The big-voiced opera star sang in a frigid Seoul theater, where her breath condensed into cold clouds as she hit the high notes.

Once in her opera and concert career, she had been troubled in one place "with bats flying back and forth," she said, but never before had she been able to watch her songs as they came out.

Earlier in the day, the St. Louis opera star had another unusual first in her concert career.

She sang aboard the hospital ship Consolation and could not even seen her accompanist, who was playing a small organ in the far corner of a mess hall.

"I just struck out and sang," she laughed, "And we got together as we went along."

Miss Traubel, in private Mrs. William Bass, toured the wards with her husband, then sang over the ship's loudspeaker system.

She said after seeing the wounded she "sang soft things" —No Wagner.

"It is wonderful what they are doing there," she added, "how they are taking care of the wounded. Those boys are wonderful. I am so glad I came."

Bigotry Blamed For Gotham Riot

14 Injured After 3 Youths Hurl Bomb In Spanish-Dominated Bar

NEW YORK (AP) — Three young bigots, one of whom police said wanted to "show these spics something," discharged a phosphorus bomb in a crowded tavern here early today.

The action touched off events which brought death to one of them and injuries to 14 others. Thirteen of the injured were in the tavern.

A few minutes later, and eight blocks away, police shot and fatally wounded one of the servicemen, identified as Marine Sgt. James Eugene McDermott, 18. He died in a hospital.

During the chase and scuffle which led to the capture of McDermott and one of his companions, a patrolman allegedly was knifed by McDermot to bring the injured count to 14.

Only three of the 14 injured, including a federal narcotics agent and a second patrolman, both hurt in the blast, were kept in hospitals after treatment.

* * *

POLICE SAID bigotry detonated the violence in an Upper West Side Manhattan area partly inhabited by a large number of Puerto Ricans. Eight of those injured in the bar had Spanish names.

The term "spics" is a derogatory word used to describe Americans of Spanish origin.

Officials said the three youths—a sailor in uniform and an airman and a Marine, both in civilian clothes—had been drinking in the bar.

One of the trio pulled out the explosive, a grenade filled with phosphorus. All three then fled in a waiting taxi.

Two off-duty policemen in the vicinity at the time chased the trio to 96th and Broadway, where the Marine and airman were caught. The sailor escaped.

Milk Handlers Get Permit Reminder

Restaurants, food stores and others who sell milk in Circleville were reminded Tuesday that the deadline is near for renewal of their city permits as milk handlers.

The reminder was issued by City Health Director C. O. Leist, who added milk products also come under the regulation. Ice cream and butter are excepted, he said.

New 1953 permits can be obtained at Leist's office at $1 each. The old ones expire New Year's eve.

Leist said similar permits must be obtained or renewed by anyone who keeps hogs inside the city limits.

Ike-Taft Tariff Views Hold Key

WASHINGTON (AP) — Sen. Monroney (D-Okla) predicted today the chances for harmony between President - elect Eisenhower and Sen. Taft (R-Ohio) will get an early test on the issue of U. S. aid to Europe.

Monroney, just back from an overseas tour, said the Europeans' quest for a bigger U. S. market for their goods to replace dollar aid will present "the problem of whether the internationally-minded Eisenhower people can prevail over the Taft people's high protective tariff views."

Army To Trim Draftee Duty

WASHINGTON (AP)—After Jan. 1, Army draftees rotated home from Korea will be released if they have completed at least 20 months of active service, Secretary of the Army Pace announced Monday.

The normal service for draftees is 24 months. The Army previously had said those with active duty in Korea would be released after 21 months, because of that service. The new policy also applies to draftees who return to this country before Jan. 1, if they have not left a reception center for reassignment to a new station by that date.

Memorial Rites Held For Victims

MOSES LAKE, Wash. (AP)—Memorial services were scheduled today for 86 servicemen who died Saturday in aviation's worst disaster.

The rites, in both Protestant and Catholic chapels at Lawson Air Force Base came only a few short hours after a 35-man investigating board ended a marathon night session. Their findings will not be made public until they are forwarded to the Pentagon.

Knox County Hills Yield 'Black Gold'

MOUNT VERNON (AP)—Oil prospectors believe a large pool of "black gold" may lie beneath the hills of Jackson Township in Knox County.

In the last 12 months the drillers have discovered 60 wells out of 72 tries. Thirteen of the wells also produced natural gas. The largest well let go 300 barrels the first day. It stands on a small, old schoolhouse site owned by Walter Hess.

Minette Kicks Herself Right Out Of Grave

BROADSTAIRS, England (AP)—Minette found a hole in the ground she seemed to prefer to her regular habitat as a show pony.

Just how she got there was a mystery, but she was found standing placidly in the quiet of an unoccupied—save for herself—six-foot grave that had been newly dug in St. Peters Cemetery.

The gravedigger couldn't get her to budge and called the fire brigade. They came with ropes, tackle and pulley blocks. One fireman was ingenious. Noting that Minette's flanks were close against the grave walls, he suggested they shovel earth into the pit.

As the dirt fell around her, Minette angrily stamped her hoofs, pounding the earth down and slowly building up the level of the grave floor. Soon she was up to ground level again, and the gravedigger faced the task of shoveling all the dirt out again.

DiSalle Seeking Industry Nod

WASHINGTON (AP) — Michael V. DiSalle, back in the anti-inflation program as economic stabilizer, says industry "should accept its responsibility" and end a boycott of the Wage Stabiliztion Bord.

The seven industry members of the board quit in protest against President Truman's handling of a coal mine wage case. DiSalle, sworn in Monday, said he had asked the U. S. chamber of Commerce and the National Association of Manufacturers to nominate new members. He said he believed industry would return "now that they've made their point."

Glover got a suspended sentence.

Ike Is Still Giving Quiet 'No' To Compulsory FEPC Talks

NEW YORK (AP)—President-elect Eisenhower still is saying what amounts to a quiet "no" to requests that he back legislation to create a fair employment practices commission (FEPC) with enforcement authority.

That explosive issue which split the Democrats in the Truman administration keeps cropping up to confront Eisenhower, but he reportedly is determined it won't cause him trouble.

It came up again Monday when a group of Negro clergymen called at the general's headquarters to ask, among other things, that he "use the authority and influence" of the presidency to bring about:

"The establishment of fair employment legislation which will prohibit the 'starving out' because of color, race or creed those who are otherwise qualified for the jobs they seek."

And what was Eisenhower's reaction to that request?

DR. W. J. Jernagin, spokesman for the delegation of Negroes, told newsmen the President-elect was deeply interested in the problem of hiring-and-firing discrimination against Negroes and other minority groups and said everyone wants to eliminate such discrimination but that there are differences as to the best method.

Eisenhower previously had let it be known he felt the best method was not through legislation, such as President Truman proposed, which would create an FEPC with authority to enforce its rulings.

Shortly after he was nominated last July, another group of Negroes called on Eisenhower in Denver. They also were interested in creation of an FEPC.

The general told that group he wasn't convinced they had the solution. He said he felt much more could be accomplished through educational programs.

Aides report he still feels that way about it, and that he gives no encouragement to those who campaign for "compulsory" legislation.

As he did during the campaign, he pledged in talking to the group Monday that he will name a commission to study problems confronting minority groups in the United States. That commission probably will be appointed shortly after he takes office Jan. 20.

Friend, Judge Keep Ohio GI Out Of Jail

SAN FRANCISCO (AP)—Pvt. Herman Rossi, 20, of Lima, Ohio, has an unknown friend and a kind judge to thank for the fact he won't spend Christmas in jail before shipping overseas.

Rossi was awaiting sentence Monday in municipal court on a charge of kicking in the window of a camera store. Store owner Leo Gold told Judge John J. McMahon:

"Forget the $17.50 the window cost. Make it $10."

A spectator at the rear of the courtroom came forward, silently handed the judge $17.50 and walked out. Judge McMahon handed Gold $10 and then said to Rossi:

"Young man, I suppose you know we usually send you fellows to jail. However, suppose you take this $7.50 and have a good time before you sail. And Merry Christmas."

Rossi said he kicked in the window because he had an "excess of spirits."

Civil Service Group Delays Chief's Case

A meeting of Circleville's Civil Service Commission to "iron out legal points involved" in the controversy surrounding the suspension of Circleville Police Chief William F. McCrady has been postponed until next Monday night.

The commission scheduled a session Monday after the Chief defied a 15-day suspension and announced in a letter that he was "reporting for duty".

However, it was agreed by the commission and counsel for the Chief and Mayor Ed Amey to postpone the deliberations one week.

Prearranged plans relating to the Christmas season were given as reason for putting off the meeting.

Spokesmen for the Civil Service group have definite assurance the session now slated for Dec. 29 will be only for the purpose of untangling legal technicalities. At that session, they explained, a commission hearing for the Chief may be scheduled.

* * *

JOE ADKINS, attorney for McCrady, said the Chief doesn't have to file formal request for such hearing.

"They have to give it to him," he said.

Adkins was also under the impression no hearing will be held next Monday, but he pointed out the plans could be changed later and added:

"We're prepared (for the hearing) whenever they're ready."

Adkins filed a request for lifting of the Chief's suspension during the brief meeting held Monday night. Apparently no other action was taken except to set the new date for Dec. 29.

McCrady's suspension was announced Dec. 15 by the mayor after McCrady allegedly violated a safety department regulation covering the use of city police cruisers.

In declaring the enforced layoff illegal while it still had a week to go, McCrady in his letter claimed the Civil Service group was not notified of his suspension in the manner prescribed by law.

Meanwhile, Mayor Amey earlier announced he plans to hand the Chief another 15-day layoff next Monday for an alleged unauthorized trip to Stoutsville on Dec. 2.

'Anticipation' Gone, DiSalle Says Of Job

WASHINGTON (AP) — Michael V. DiSalle, returning to the government as economic stabilization administrator, likened his swearing-in today to getting married for the third time.

"The original anticipation seems to be gone," DiSalle wisecracked to some 120 officials who saw the oath administered by Mobilization Director Henry H. Fowler in President Truman's news conference room

"But speaking most seriously," the former OPS director went on, "If I didn't believe there was a job to be done here I wouldn't be here.

"If we should demobilize now, the rise in the cost of living might be slow but it would be sure. The inevitable result would be a further devaluation of the dollar."

DiSalle urged his audience, mostly executives of the price, wage and rent agencies he will direct, to "go out and work overtime, if necessary, to do the kind of job that has to be done."

DiSalle said he and the administration were resolved to turn over to President-elect Dwight D. Eisenhower a "functioning and going stabilization program, one we can be proud of," for the new administration to operate—or discard—as it chooses.

Building Offers Huge Greeting

LOS ANGELES (AP) — The 1,400 employees of the Prudential insurance Company's Western home office have unveiled what they believe is the nation's largest Christmas greeting, 400 feet long and nine stories high.

Covering 672 big windows and virtually the whole north side of the building, it consists of a series of 47 colored illustrations which tell the "Babes in Toyland" story.

Projectionist Is Lauded For Aid In Blaze

PITTSBURGH (AP) — Fire Chief M. F. Schulte of suburban Carnegie credited the 45-year-old projectionist of a theater with averting a disaster during a quick-spreading fire which destroyed a three-story building occupied by the Louisa Theater.

More than 200 patrons, mostly children, were attending a matinee Sunday when John Stanton saw smoke curling from the ceiling. He stopped his projection machine, turned on the lights and told the audience:

"There is no reason to be alarmed. Just walk out quickly. Don't run. And stay out until we're sure everything is all right."

The fire, which caused damage estimated by Schulte at more than $150,000, gutted the building. The top floors were occupied by bowling alleys.

One of Stanton's four children, Robert, 8, was among the theater patrons. His father's first act, after clearing the theater, was to call home for assurance of his son's safety.

2 Buckeye GIs Hurt In Accident

OAKLAND, Ia (AP)—Two Ohioans stationed at Lowry Air Field, Denver, were hospitalized Sunday after a three vehicle crash here.

Although many sharks are dangerous to men or animals in the Uter, others feed on nothing but microscopic sea animals and plants.

Child Problems and Solutions

By GARRY CLEVELAND MYERS, PhD

Around this time of year many parents are puzzled over the matter of Santa Claus.

They wonder whether it is good for the child to be encouraged to believe in this myth.

Teachers in the early grades are also puzzled. While they prefer to answer the child frankly on questions he may ask about Santa Claus, they are aware that parents may be offended were teachers to disillusion him.

Some teachers get around this problem by suggesting to the child that he direct these questions to his parents.

• • •

BUT, AS teachers and parents are slowly coming to the belief that Santa Claus belongs to the preschool age, this problem is waning to a large extent.

Santa Claus fits into the normal imagination of the young child. Around Old Saint Nick he builds a happy world. To rob him of his belief in Santa Claus would be to take away from him several years of joyous experiences.

Besides, it would make Christmas-time rather drab for his parents, older brothers, sisters and playmates as well.

Consider the fun the older child who "knows" has at keeping the younger one from being disillusioned unduly early. Of course, some older children, awaking to realities about Santa Claus, like to impress younger children with superiority.

Yet in a family of happy understanding and relationships, these older children enjoy co-operating at helping the preschool child continue with his delight in Santa Claus.

When each of our own children grew disillusioned, around the age of six or seven, he was asked whether we should "tell" the next younger child.

"Oh, no!" always came the response, with strong feeling. And the older ones continued to hang up their stockings with the younger and to act out the myth in various other ways as long as he liked it.

But as soon as each child wanted to know if Santa Claus were a real person, we always answered candidly, "No, we have just been pretending that he is," and then we kept on pretending as long as the young inquirer wished.

• • •

WE OBSERVED no evidence of shock in any of our children when disillusioned. On asking each child some years later of his experiences, none indicated that he felt we had deceived him. Many years before these children had families of their own, they said they were going to have Santa Claus for their children.

And all the twelve young grandchildren have experienced Santa Claus as their parents had.

A good way to help the young child gradually to outgrow Santa Claus is to have a few presents for him under the Christmas tree labeled as from real persons along with those marked "From Santa Claus."

We help prepare the young child to get his greatest joy from Santa Claus and we read a great deal to him from folk lore and from other sources that fire his imagination, as we enjoy his yarns of fantasy and appreciate his creations with words and things.

Q. Our son, six, often asks a question which, I am sure, he could answer himself. What should we do then?

A. Don't rebuke him for such a question or tell him he should know the answer. Merely help him to recall certain items you are pretty sure he can, in such a way that he will arrive at the answer to his own question.

Teen Tips

If you see a high school boy with a faraway look in his eyes at this time of year, he's probably not figuring out a math problem or even planning his next Friday night date. He's wondering what to give his favorite date for Christmas.

So let's tackle the "do's" and don'ts" of the problem right now.

First, you can relax, boys. It isn't considered good taste to give your dream girl a big, expensive present. And it's not good manners to give her something to wear unless it's an accessory or a small piece of costume jewelry—not clothes. So that narrows the choice. Here are some suggestions that won't take too much of this month's allowance:—

Accessories — Fluffy white angora mittens, possibly with matching socks. A gay silk or wool scarf. A pretty compact containing face powder, puff and mirror. A "special" lipstick perhaps "jewelled" with sparkly stones (the lip color should be clear red, not too dark). A little evening bag for formal dances—black velvet; gold, silver or white are good choices. A pen or automatic pencil—or both.

Costume jewelery — a necklace of small pearls. A "gold" bracelet with a dangly gold or pearl ornament.

For her hobby — A record holder. A snap-shot album. An autograph book.

A book (a famous romance or historical adventure. A box of candy.

Fall Enrollment Shows Decline In Universities

CINCINNATI (AP)—Fall enrollment dipped slightly in 830 accredited universities and four-year colleges this year, but the drop was less than anticipated and far less than the 1951 decrease.

This was reported in the college enrollment survey of Dr. Raymond Walters, president of the University of Cincinnati, who has issued study results annually since 1919.

Dr. Walters said the 830 colleges reported a total enrollment of 1,293,524 full-time students, a decline of 1.5 per cent from the previous year, and 462,848 part-time students, a decline of 2.8 per cent.

He added, "the full-time decrease is small when contrasted with the 1951 drop of 11.4 per cent from the figures for 950."

The educator said an unexpected upsurge in freshmen enrollment, coupled with upper-class girl students remaining in college, was responsible for the continued high enrollment.

He listed these 10 largest institutions reporting to him: California, 33,770; Illinois, 18,592; Minnesota, 18,406; University of Michigan, 17,008; Ohio State, 16,410; Wisconsin, 15,626; New York University, 15,509; Texas, 13,932; Michigan State College, 12,402; Washington (Seattle), 12,249.

British Artificial Arm Being Lauded

NEW YORK (AP)—A handless ex-GI leader says the British have a better artificial arm than the United States—and he hopes the Veterans Administration will agree.

Russell, who lost both hands in World War II, said he would ask Amvets to urge the VA to adopt the British arm.

World Today

By James Marlow

WASHINGTON (AP) — George Meany, president of the American Federation of Labor, was simply facing up to reality when he said his organization is ready to settle for less than repeal of the Taft-Hartley Act.

Neither Meany nor any other leader of organized labor is in position to insist on wiping out T-H, which was passed over President Truman's veto in 1947 when the Republicans last controlled Congress.

Union leaders now, with the Republicans once again in control, have to settle for the best they can get, which won't be any more than some changes in T-H. They'll have to concentrate on getting the changes they want.

They had given their support in the last election to the Democrats, who had promised repeal of T-H. But the Democrats had promised the same thing in 1948 and couldn't deliver.

And, if they had won this time, they probably could not have delivered either. In recent years, no matter who controlled Congress, organized labor simply did not have enough support among the legislators to kill T-H.

In their 1952 campaign the Republicans didn't promise repeal. They talked only of making changes. Meany expressed confidence that organized labor, through the Republicans, could "get the kind of law we want" by amending T-H.

And that's the most organized labor can expect to see done to the law which was sponsored by Sen. Taft, Ohio Republican, when he was chairman of the Senate Labor Committee in 1947-48.

Judging from the voting records of the labor committee members—all the Democrats and some of the Republicans—it's unlikely any T-H changes would be approved by the committee unpleasing to organized labor.

It's the job of the labor committee to consider proposed changes in T-H and then approve only those it wants. This is not final. The House Labor Committee will make a similar study, and then the full Senate and House have their say.

No matter what changes the committees like the senators and House members on the floor can offer any amendments they want before final vote.

So the kind of changes blessed by the two labor committees could be dropped and entirely different ones substituted on the floor by members less friendly to organized labor than some of the committee members.

Cold Cash May Cure Nation's Ills; Main Blame Laid To U. S. Public

WASHINGTON (AP)—Cold cash appears to be the main prescription of President Truman's special Health Commission for curing the nation's "demonstrable, well-documented health needs."

In reporting such needs last week after a year-long survey, the commission indirectly laid some of the blame at the door of the medical profession.

But it also strongly implied society as a whole is largely responsible for the situation and should bear the brunt of correction—principally by digging deeper into its governmental and private pocketbook.

The criticism of doctors and allied health personnel included allegations that:

1. There are overall organizational deficincies in the way these professional people apply their combined skills;

2. Some doctors are guilty of what the report called such "reprehensible conduct" as fee-splitting;

3. Family doctors and specialists are too often in "isolation" from one another and so do not coordinate their skills for the best good of the patient;

4. The medical profession hasn't made completely adequate provision for the continued, up-to-the-minute education of the family doctor after he sets up practice, although sometimes individual doctors are themselves to blame;

5. The medical schools aren't giving enough emphasis in their general training to matters concerning the physical and emotional development of mothers and children;

6. Annual health examinations of school children are too often performed in perfunctory fashion by school doctors.

But the report implied the heart of the nation's health problem lies outside the health professions themselves—and that its solution lies in the public providing financial support for:

1. Training more doctors, dentists, nurses and other health workers—and encouraging their more equitable distribution throughout the nation.

2. Building more hospitals, particularly in rural and other areas reportedly short in them.

3. Spurring medical research, especially against such things as cancer and mental illness.

4. Putting medical and hospital care on a pre-paid insurance basis for everyone, with federal and state governments teaming up for help people who can't pay for their own insurance or can only pay part of it.

5. Making such a pre-payment system cover all phases of medical and hospital care.

6. Encouraging the organization of doctors and other health workers into team-like "groups" in all parts of the country—a system which the commission contends would go far towards meeting the country's health needs.

As examples of how it contends the nation is presently falling down on the job, the commission cites these:

1. Last year, the total national expenditure for medical research was 180 million dollars—which the commission said was less than the amount spent on building monuments and tombstones.

2. "In rural areas, recipients of public assistance often get second-rate care from the standpoint both of medical science and human dignity. The system of poorly-paid 'county physicians' still in vogue in many parts of the country is a medical shame."

Here is a digest of some of the findings with regard to the nation's health conditions as outlined by the commission:

1. Disabled people: Some two million of the nation's total of disabled people could be placed in employment or more productive work—if there were sufficient rehabilitation programs in effect, employing teams of experts.

2. Chronic diseases: Long-duration ills like cancer, tuberculosis, rheumatism and heart disease account for about 1½ billion dollars in public expenditures annually for medical and hospital services—"yet probably in no other health field is available knowledge so little applied as in the prevention of chronic disease."

3. Mental illness: Half the patients in all the nation's hospitals are people with mental illness, and about half the patients consulting doctors outside hospitals have some kind of an emotional disorder. Yet, knowledge of mental illness of various kinds is still in a "rudimentary" state.

4. Dental disease: There is "shocking evidence" that the American people need more dental care—for example, a lot of people need false teeth before they are 24.

5. Environmental health conditions: Seven million American homes lack running water; one third of the nation's dwellings are overcrowded, lack decent toilet facilities, or are otherwise deficient.

6. Child health: "Enormous gains" have been made in the prevention and cure of disease in children—but "there remain many deficiences in health services to the children of this nation."

Negro Woman Faces Execution

LIVE OAK, Fla. (AP)—Mrs. Ruby McCollum, Negro convicted of slaying a white doctor, has been returned to the Suwannee County Jail to await a ruling on a motion for a new trial.

The widowed mother of three children was convicted Saturday of first degree murder in the slaying of Dr. C. Leroy Adams, whom she declared was the father of her 15-month-old child. The jury, which deliberated a little more than three hours, did not recommend mercy, making the death penalty mandatory.

'Typical' Ohio Factory Aide To Get $4,000

COLUMBUS (AP)—The Ohio State Employment Service today predicted a $4,000 gross annual salary for the "typical" Ohio factory worker in 1953 if he is employed on a year-round basis at present wage rates.

The report issued by William Papier, director of the division of Research and Statistics, said payrolls for Ohio's three million factory workers would reach an all-time high of nine billion dollars this year.

Production workers in the state's factories now gross about $78.40 a week on an average pay scale of $1.88 an hour.

The report said statewide employment continues high but declared there is a labor surplus in Southern and Eastern Ohio Areas with the greatest labor surplus are the Belmont - Harrison - Jefferson County area and the Athens-Hocking County area. Increased unemployment in those areas was blamed on closing of coal mines, lack of defense work and the small industrial growth.

CHRISTMAS EVE

STILL THE CHRISTMAS cards with scenes depict rural life—whether Currier and Ives or Grandma Moses. Snow is an invariable part of the picture. But Americans, on Christmas Eve, whether they live in snow country or not, dwelling in city or country, feel the lovely isolation that comes with deep, feathery snow outside and a blazing hearth within.

It is on Christmas Eve that families withdraw into themselves in the rural spirit of Clement Moore's "A Visit from St. Nicholas." Then it is that the occasion and the celebration of Christmas melt into one warm, simple emotion in our hearts. And with children in the house there can be nothing but blended delight in visions of Santa Claus and the Baby Jesus, arriving simultaneously.

What does a home contain in this Christmas Eve hush—a hush as if snow outdoors muffled all worldly sounds? Most important, of course, is love, the kind Jesus Christ generated for all humanity to feel and act upon if it wished. In Christmas Eve translation it shines in the act of dressing the tree with tinsel and gay baubles.

It is something that clears the heads of a husband and wife who suddenly realize all Christmas shopping is done, all stockings filled, and the turkey is ready for popping into the oven on the morrow. It is something that children, in bed at last, feel to their morrow in a happy glow of security and anticipation.

What if the fireplace is not of a size to accommodate a huge Yule log—or the dining table a roast pig? Be the dwelling large or small, rural or urban, the open-country, snow-outside feeling of Christmas Eve is with us. Here in America tonight, the hush falls.

Merry Christmas!

EVER STRIVING

GIVEN SUFFICIENT time, science may yet catch up with the comics. New hope is seen in the report that physicists at Stanford University are successfully working with an atom smasher using "bullets" which travel almost at the speed of light.

Properly perfected, this device could become a ray gun or a disintegrator of a sort that cartoonists conceived years ago. But there's no telling what science writers may think of by that time.

Justice Frankfurter of the Supreme Court once said a member of that body ought to retire when 70 years of age. His honor is now 70.

George E. Sokolsky's

These Days

I recently attended a meeting of the Yale Political Union Intercollegiate Forum where I heard M. R. Werner deliver a poignant address on the handling of political news in daily newspapers during the recent campaign. Mr. Werner was a supporter of Adlai Stevenson and his general theme was that while the country enjoyed a two party system, it enjoyed a one party press.

Mr. Werner cited examples, principally but not exclusively from the New York City press, to show that Stevenson had not been treated fairly, that by editorials, news slanting, the disposition of space and pictures, Eisenhower had all the advantage.

As I thought it over at leisure, it occurred to me that there are many other sides to that story. Newspapers are no conveyor belts. They have many forms and always have had since the "Spectator" days of Addison and Steele and in this country since John Peter Zenger. The newspapers of Greeley, Bennett, Pulitzer, Raymond, Hearst, and other great figures were personal journals that conveyed the views of their owners with a partisanship altogether unknown today.

If the ownership of a newspaper is to be altogether without views, opinions and decisions, the editorial page should disappear altogether. If the proprietors are to hold no views, why have a variety of newspapers? Why not have one newspaper in each city, one press service for the country supervised by the government?

On the other hand, the reader had a right to expect Stevenson's speeches covered as fully as Eisenhower's, and they probably were in the leading newspapers. I have not made such a study as Mr. Werner has, but Stevenson, who was hardly known to most Americans prior to his nomination, has gained a national reputation as one of the best orators this country has produced. He could not have such a reputation were his speeches not printed in newspapers.

Most American newspapers publish columnists who pick up the role of argumentative writing discarded by some editors. Even in cities which have only one newspaper, columnists of varying views are published. Stevenson had more support then Eisenhower among the columnists. It is true that many writers who feel that their reputations depend upon never being wrong, are now covering their tracks by being excessively pro-Eisenhower, but during the campaign, the columnists divided up and the newspapers were able to present both sides in this manner. It is a fallacy to assume that any judgment can be made of newspaper coverage without due regard to the columnists.

After any campaign, there are post mortems. As a Republican, I have lived through them for 20 years. Most of them are wrong. Those of us who were opposed to Roosevelt and Truman used to explain our failures in many ways; yet, we never quite were willing to recognize the simple truth that the American people actually wanted Roosevelt and that nothing we said or proved changed their minds. It may be a discouraging admission for those who are so wise as we are, but the fact does stand so. Furthermore, the reason that many

By HERMAN N. BUNDESEN, M.D.

MOST mothers do not realize that migraine headaches can occur in children as well as adults, although the complaint most often does develop later in life.

If you know someone afflicted with migraine, you may have found out how these severe headaches are dreaded, and how they can disable a person.

When the sufferer is either a child or an adult, there is usually some hereditary background. The child may have a strong tendency toward allergy, while other members of his family may also have migraine.

Attacks Differ

At the same time, the attacks are somewhat different in children. The headaches as a rule become as prolonged and stubborn as they may in adults.

Many adults go without a migraine attack for months. With children, the attacks seem to come very frequently, in many cases as often as two to three times a week.

Usually the child complains of one-sided headaches which are almost unbearable. Before a headache occurs, the child may see spots before the eyes, have a fainting spell, smell a strong odor, or have some other type of warning that an attack is on the way.

Once the attack starts, the headache is severe. Usually the child becomes nauseated and has severe vomiting.

Many of these attacks can be relieved before they even get started with a drug known as ergotamine tartrate, combined with caffeine. Usually a headache can be avoided if the child is given a certain number of the pills as soon as he senses the warning sign of an attack. The drugs known as the antihistamines have also proved helpful in treating this disorder in a number of cases.

Not too infrequently, children suffering from migraine also have convulsions or mild epilepsy. Usually these children respond to small doses of dilantin or phenobarbital, drugs used to prevent convulsions in epilepsy.

Dilantin Helps

It has also been found that many children with migraine who do not respond to other forms of treatment are helped by dilantin, even though they have no convulsions.

Of course, all these drugs must be prescribed by a physician and taken under his careful direction, as the exact dose must be adapted to the patient.

Prompt treatment is also important for a child with migraine headaches. If the condition continues too long untreated, it is much harder to remedy.

Try, Stop Me

George Bernard Shaw once wrote an article called "Is God an Englishman?" One of his lifelong detractors commented, "Not bad reading, but it is quite obvious that whenever Mr. Shaw mentions 'God' he means 'himself.'"

In the fourth quarter of a wildly exciting football game, a fervent member of Notre Dame's subway alumni sank back weakly in his seat and croaked, "I've lost my verce." The elderly party sitting next to him said wearily, "Don't worry, you'll find it in my left ear."

A slick spieler in a backwoods carnival cleaned up selling "Atomic Bomb Protection" for a dollar. The "protection," it turned out, was merely a big plastic bag you were supposed to slip over your hand. An enclosed circular announced, "If for any reason, complete atomic protection is not afforded, your dollar will be cheerfully refunded."

CHAPTER TWENTY-ONE

BRIAN leaped up, and, pulling Emily to her feet, threw his arms around her and, taking her in a viselike hold, kissed her as she had never been kissed before. It was completely useless for her to struggle for freedom; since she could not escape the embrace, she had no choice but to accept it. When Brian finally released his grip to the extent of holding her at arm's length, he looked down at her with savage joy.

"Now kiss back, darling, and then we'll really get someplace," he said, drawing her toward him again.

"No, we won't. Let me go, Brian. You haven't any right—"

"I've every right. I'm a free man and you're a free woman and I'm so much in love with you that I'm not going to wait for you another day."

"You'll have to."

"And what'll make me, I'd like to know? Not you, my dear. I tell you, all you need is—"

"I will make you. I won't marry you. I can't. I'm in love with someone else."

He gripped her elbows hard. "You say you're in love with someone else. How long has this been going on?"

"In a way, it's been going on for years."

"You mean, before Roger died?"

"Don't look at me that way, Brian. It wasn't—I didn't. . ."

He let go her arms and stood facing her squarely. "And I know you're telling me the truth," he went on. "I know you weren't ever disloyal to him. This other thing you're talking about—it was something you didn't expect, something you didn't even know existed. This other man—does he know how you feel?"

"I think he must. Of course I never told him so. But, before he went away—"

"Before he went away where?"

"Why, he's been in the service, too, Briny. And, before he left Boston—"

"Then he had made love to you? It didn't matter to him that you were married, the way it did to me?"

"Please let me finish, Brian. He had—he'd attempted a little light lovemaking. Nothing like—well, nothing like what you did just now," she added, her color deepening still further. Only one very casual kiss and a few more or less ardent remarks. The sort of thing that used to be called flirtation, I believe. I don't think I was the only woman he kissed casually and talked to that way. I think it was more or less natural for him to do so. I'm sure he was very attractive to women generally, and I suppose that type—"

"Yes. I know all about that type. In fact, we had one in our office." He broke off suddenly. "You don't mean to tell me—" he began. Then he interrupted himself again. "Go on," he said curtly, after a moment's pause.

"Perhaps you don't know as much as you think you do about that type, Brian," Emily said calmly. "Because when this man I'm talking about really had a chance to make all kinds of love to me, when I'm afraid I mightn't have tried to stop him, he didn't do it. He had just as much to do with saving my marriage as I had myself. But before he went away, he did tell me that he loved me. He did say that if things had been different. . . He thought he had a right to say that much. I'm not sure whether he did or not, but I know he thought so. I know he wouldn't have done it unless he had."

"And you didn't hear from him again before Roger died?"

"Never directly. Not once."

"But you've heard from him since?"

"Yes. Naturally he wrote me letters of condolence."

"With his tongue in his cheek!"

"Was your tongue in your cheek when you wrote me after Roger died, Brian? You say you've been in love with me for years too! Please be fair! . . .

"He didn't ask you outright to marry him?"

"Brian, I don't think you have a right to ask for so many details. The letters have been wonderful. They've made me very happy. They've given me something to live for again. Don't you remember, you said yourself you didn't know what would happen to make me feel again that life was worthwhile, but that you knew something would? Well, these letters have. They've made me content to wait. They've raised me to that state of expectancy you talked about."

"And now you've heard that this man's coming home?"

"Yes. I had a letter this morning. He said he wasn't sure yet when he could get here, but sometime this week. He said he'd let me know. He said—oh, Briny, he said he had something very important to tell me, something that couldn't wait any longer!"

Her voice, which at first had been so quiet, then troubled and then calm again, suddenly rang out with gladness. She looked up at Brian with shining eyes.

"I meant to tell you about this today anyhow," she said. "I was all ready to when—when you interrupted me. I wanted you to know that you'd been right, that I did have something worth waiting for. I didn't bring you here to the attic accidentally or casually. I brought you because I knew no one would find us here, because we'd be undisturbed, because I didn't want anyone to break in on us while I was telling you something so important. And I thought after I'd told you, we would have a second drink—just a little one. A—a sort of toast. I didn't dream, you see that you felt the way you did—the way you do. I'm terribly sorry, Brian. I think a lot of you. But I'm not in love with you. I couldn't be. You understand that now, don't you?"

"Yes, I understand that now."

"So of course you don't want to drink the toast? Of course you'd rather go downstairs."

"But of course I do want to drink it! Of course I wouldn't dream of going downstairs until I had."

He leaned over and picked up the two glasses that had been set down on the floor. Then he lifted one of the old hand-blown bottles with the GOOD HOPE label chained about it and poured out the fragrant old rum. This gurgled a little in its flow, and when the glasses were filled, it showed a rich warm color, one that had mellowed with long years and with much voyaging to distant parts of the world. Brian put the old bottle back in its place and, after handing Emily her glass, raised his own.

"I can't toast you personally," he said, "because then you couldn't drink with me and of course that's what I want you to do. So let's drink instead to your married happiness—with a husband who loves you better than anyone else in the world!"

* * *

The telegram, announcing David's impending arrival, came in the following morning. Emily had not dared look for it so soon, in view of the previous non-committal statement that he would arrive "some day that week." Now she devoured the message with hungry eyes.

HAVE JUST CLEARED THE POST PERIOD CATCHING FIRST POSSIBLE TRAIN TO BOSTON PERIOD EXPECT ME LATE AFTERNOON PERIOD DAVID

"Late afternoon" might mean anything from five onward—possibly from four onward, though Emily decided not to count on that. She had lain awake the greater part of the previous night, trying to map out a tentative plan of action.

It would have been helpful if David had been a little more definite in his letter. It had not said whether he was now about to be separated from the service, or whether he was merely coming home on leave; in the latter case, he would have only about thirty days. But a great deal could be done in thirty days. A great deal could happen—a great many wonderful things. . .

She finally fell asleep thinking of these wonderful things and then, in the morning, came the telegram. Of course that did not enlighten her as to David's plans, any more than the letter had. But there were only a few more hours to wait, before he would talk to her about them. She went downstairs to tell her grandmother that he would be there that afternoon, and Old Mrs. Forbes was delighted to learn of this imminent arrival.

"Have you told that young Irishman David's coming back?" Old Mrs. Forbes inquired.

"Yes. That is, I didn't mention David by name, but I said—"

"You let him know you had other interests. I knew you'd been through some kind of a scene. No doubt he knew to whom you were referring, even if you didn't mention David by name. He must have had some idea how things were in that quarter. And I never thought those two liked each other, particularly."

"No. I'm afraid they didn't."

NATIONAL WHIRLIGIG

news behind the news

By Ray Tucker

WASHINGTON, Dec. 24 — Although Representative Joseph W. Martin Jr., speaker of the House in the next session, favors constructive legislative action instead of endless and time-consuming investigations, Republican leaders on Capitol Hill have decided to keep the congressional spotlight on two winning issues in the recent campaign—communism and corruption.

Although several post-election revelations underlie and justify this decision, GOP strategists have in mind a definite political objective. They hope to utilize forthcoming disclosures of Truman-Acheson delinquencies in these matters to insure Republican control of the executive and legislative branches of the government for many years ahead, possible matching the Democrats' 20-year tenancy at Washington.

* * *

SCANDAL—In short, they aim to capitalize on alleged Democratic tolerance of Commies and crooks in the same way that Roosevelt and Truman, in their five successive Presidential sweeps, exploited Harding's Teapot Dome scandal and the "Hoover depression."

If those relatively minor lapses were good for so many ballot-box victories, the GOP-ers think they can duplicate those successes on the basis of these new and extremely emotional issues.

This exploitation may prove to be politically helpful, if President-elect Eisenhower should be unable to halt or win the current Cold War, or if large-scale conflict should break out between the United States and Russia during his term or terms. It would, in the Republicans' opinion, place the responsibility for such a catastrophe directly on the Democrats.

If this should seem like political fantasy, there is the fact that many GOP orators in the recent campaign pursued this same argument with respect to the events leading to World War II, and to Roosevelt-Truman concessions to Russia before the Communist attack in Korea.

As they put it, the inevitable reaction to wartime and postwar agreements (Yalta, Teheran, Potsdam), as well as to Acheson't policies in the Far East, was the police action in Korea.

* * *

PURSUIT OF REDS—The Republicans now maintain that Capitol Hill's bipartisan pursuit of Communists and fellow-travelers within the Truman and Roosevelt administrations has been vindicated by impartial and nonpolitical bodies. The very men praised and defended by Truman and Acheson have been condemned by grand juries, the United Nations and their own Loyalty Review Board.

The two most distinguished figures—Owen Lattimore and John Carter Vincent—admittedly had great influence in shaping our attitude toward the Nationalist-Communist struggle for possession of China in the postwar period.

Their writings and behavior showed that they were hostile to Chiang Kai-shek, and partial to the Reds. Acheson himself relied heavily on their advice.

* * *

STUPID, INEPT—It may not be possible to prove that they committed any acts of outright disloyalty. As was true of Alger Hiss, Lattimore has been indicted only on the ground that he perjured himself in testifying before the McCarran committee.

But the uncontroverted facts do suggest that they, as well as the high-placed officials who framed Far Eastern policy on the basis of their advice, were inexcusably inept and stupid in one of the major crises of world history.

There is the further fact that the Democrats made the Lattimore affair an official showdown with Capitol Hill critics after Senator McCarthy characterized him as "the Soviet's top agent in the United States." Acheson eulogized him.

A law firm of ex-New Dealers —Abe Fortas, Paul A. Porter and Thurman Arnold — represented him without charge before the Tydings Committee, which handed Lattimore a "whitewash."

Finally, to their current regret, Truman and Democratic orators deliberately condemned Senators McCarthy and McCarran as the "villains" of the recent campaign.

* * *

CONFIDENTIAL — Investigating committees under a Republican administration will have an advantage which they lacked when Truman withheld many so-called confidential files from them. With Eisenhower in the White House, they will have access to military experts' disagreements with the diplomats' appraisal of world conditions, especially in the Far East.

The Republicans, for instance, have never been able to lay hands on a Navy memo which reportedly warned against acceptance of Russian reinforcement in the war against Japan. According to the Navy Board, the Japanese would have been defeated without Stalin's help or use of the atomic bomb. But FDR disregarded this advice, and gave Stalin the territorial concessions that led to the loss of China.

Numerous military recommendations dealing with China have been suppressed, lost or given out in censored form. Top-ranking members of Army and Navy policy-making groups have been forbidden to appear as witnesses before congressional committees.

In short, we may finally get the truth about events that have remade the map and history of the world. It will be a boon to historians as well as to Republican politicians.

1953 Income Tax Data Presented; Aides To Visit Here Jan. 8 And 9

Director of Internal Revenue has released the following information relative to the filing of income tax returns for the year 1952.

Every person who had gross income of $600 or more must file a return. It must be filed between Jan. 1 and March 15, 1953, with the Director of Internal Revenue, Columbus, Ohio.

You may have your tax computed by the director if your income is solely from wages and is under $5000 by filing Form 1040-A. If your income is over $5000 or is from other sources such as self-employment, partnership, rents, etc., you must file on Form 1040, listing your total receipts and expenses.

You may itemize your deductions or you may elect to take the standard deduction. Any balance of tax due must be paid in full with the filing of your return.

• • •

ASSISTANCE in preparing your return can be secured at your local office of the internal revenue department. If you desire help, be sure to bring all information as to income, wages, rents, expenses and deductions, and a copy of your previous year's return.

Form 1040-F, showing income and expenses from farming as well as Schedule "C," showing income and expenses from business, should be prepared by the taxpayer before coming into the office for assistance.

All wage slips received from your employers must be attached to your return, even though no tax was withheld from the wages. Wage earners should wait until all wage statements are received from each place of employment before filing their return, but in no event should the filing of a return be delayed beyond March 15.

Individuals who have filed estimated tax returns for 1952 which are within 80 percent of what their final tax will be and the estimated tax has been paid, may file their final income tax return for the year between Jan. 1 and March 15.

Those who have filed an estimate which will not show at least 80 percent of the tax that will be due and owing on their final 1952 income tax return and paid such an amount to the Director of Internal Revenue must amend their estimates or file their final income tax return Form 1040 in lieu of amending their estimate by Jan. 15.

Farmers may file their estimated tax returns for the year 1952 by January 15, 1953 or file their final income tax return Form 1040 with Schedule 1040-F attached in lieu of the estimate not later than Jan. 31, 1953, paying the tax shown thereon with the filing of the return.

For taxable years beginning after Dec. 31, 1950, a Social Security tax of 2.25 per cent is imposed on individuals having earnings from self-employment. Inasmuch as income from certain occupations, such as farming, physicians, attorneys, etc., are not covered, your instruction booklet should be consulted for the various types of income that are subject to the tax. Self-employment net earnings of at least $400 but not exceeding $3600 are subject to the tax.

Internal Revenue Agents Clay Covey and F.J. Malecky will be in Circleville Postoffice from 8 a. m. until 5 p. m. on Jan. 8 and Jan. 9, to assist Pickaway County taxpayers with the preparation of their returns.

Thug Romantic While He Works

CHICAGO (AP) — One of the two men who held up a chain food store last night mixed a little romance with robbery.

As cashier Mrs. Anne Lidquist, 37, was scooping out bills and silver for one of the robbers, he gave her a resounding kiss.

"Don't be afraid," he smiled, keeping his gun pointed at her. "I won't hurt you."

Paul Brown's Movie Setting Scene For Championship Tilt

CLEVELAND (AP) — Coach Paul Brown kept his movie machine whirring overtime today—plotting moves for Sunday's championship game between his Cleveland Browns and the Detroit Lions.

The perfectionist, who gives more attention to detail than a new sergeant at guard mount, uses films of past games in planning upcoming action.

Over and over he runs the pictures, noting what his team did wrong and what actions his opponents took.

What he is seeing—pictures of the 17-6 licking the Lions gave Cleveland earlier this season—does not make him happy.

And—for once—Clevelanders take him seriously when he predicts a grim future. Brown forecasting defeat once was about as convincing as a $3 bill.

For six years, as his mighty gridders galloped over all the opposition in sight, Ohioans got used to victories. Even an occasional loss failed to upset them.

* * *

"THE BROWNS always win the big ones," was the answer.

Well, last year the Browns finally lost a "big one," the championship tilt against Los Angeles. And this season they dropped four games—all of them "big ones"—before finally clutching the American Division pennant in the National League.

So now when Brown says the Lions "have outstanding personnel" he gts a respectful audience. And when he mentions "They beat us last time, you know," the audience all but shudders.

What Brown sees in his movies are Detroit's end Jim Doran and tackle Thurman McGraw roaring through the Brownie line to rush the passing of Otto Graham.

If the Browns are going to win this time, they must find a way to stop that. They also need a defense which will hinder Bobby Layne's throwing and cloister Cloyce Box, the pass-catching end.

Detroit's coach, Buddy Parker, says his team is in "good physical shape" and "we've got a good chance to win."

Connie Mack Sees Chance For A's

FT. MYERS, Fla. (AP) — Connie Mack, on his 90th birthday, predicted the 1953 Philadelphia Athletics will be the best in years.

Of course, he said Monday, the New York Yankees will be tough as usual but he likes the A's chance in the American League race. He added that he thinks it will be the best Athletic team since 1931.

Turner Shows Conditioning In Ring Win

PHILADELPHIA (AP) — Gil Turner's one-sided victory over Joe Miceli Monday night proved one thing: Turner's handlers have learned the art of conditioning.

The Turner who pounded Miceli into a mass of red welts was a well-conditioned fighter strong at the finish as at the start.

The Philadelphia Negro didn't look anything like the fighter who tried to win the welterweight title from Kid Gavilan in the Municipal Stadium here last July. Then he was too light at 144 pounds and drawn and tight looking. He had left his best fight in the gym.

At 149½ pounds Monday night, Turner was as strong as a bull. He took a lot of punishment in the first round from Miceli, the Army private stationed at Camp Kilmer, N. J. He took some strong left and right hands later on. But he came on.

As it happened, it took 58 seconds of the sixth round to complete a walloping job. Now the 22-year-old Turner wants to fight Bobby Dykes, slim Miami, Fla., welter, who holds a split decision over him.

Yanks Moan As Dixie '11' Adds Player

MIAMI, Fla. (AP) — The South's move to add a 26th player to its squad for the Shrine Christmas night charity football game in the Orange Bowl drew a protest today from coaches of the Yankee squad.

South Coach Andy Gustafson of Miami added Randy Broyles of Washington and Lee to his team Monday to replace Oklahoma's Buck McPhail, who missed several practice sessions because of a cold.

"We informed Gus that anyone not in uniform as of last Saturday would be declared ineligible," said North Coach Stu Holcomb of Purdue. "However, we will allow him to use Broyles if he will bench McPhail."

Trainer Joe Greenhut said McPhail will return to practice today and Gustafson said the Oklahoma star will start at fullback, along with All America Jack Scarbath of Maryland at quarterback; Jim Hook of Missouri and Joe Koch of Wake Forest at halfbacks.

The North is a six-point favorite to win the fifth annual all-star contest being played for the Shrine's crippled Children's Hospital fund. The South holds a 3-1 edge in the series.

Bowling Green End Captains All-Ohio Collegiate Outfit

COLUMBUS (AP)—Jim Ladd, fast and sharp Bowling Green end, captains the all-Ohio offensive squad named today in the annual Associated Press selection of all - state teams.

The lad's ability was recognized previously in the nation when he was named on the second team of the Little All-America.

A member of Little America's first team, Al Feeney of Western Reserve, won the captaincy of the defensive All-Ohio squad.

The two teams were selected with the help of 35 coaches and sports writers throughout the state. They split over the choice of an offensive center and so two men are All-Ohio snappers for the first time in the history of the AP's All-State teams. They are Lowell Anderson of Ohio University and John McVay of Miami.

Here is how the 1952 All-Ohio college football team lines up:

GUARDS: Bill Paul, Heidelberg, and Bill Shalosky, Cincinnati.

Officials Named For Title Game

PHILADELPHIA (AP) — National Football League Commissioner Bert Bell has named the men who will officiate in Sunday's NFL title clash between the Cleveland Browns and the Detroit Lions.

Thomas A. Timlin will referee the game, Samuel (Mike) Wilson will be the umpire, Charlie Brery the head linesman; Lloyd Brazil, field judge, and James H. Hamer, back judge. Bell said the game will be blacked out for TV within 75 miles of Cleveland.

Badgers, Trojans Report Injuries

PASADENA, Calif. (AP) — Wisconsin and Southern California traded Rose Bowl injury stories today, with honors about even.

The Badgers reported that their starting left halfback, Harland Carl, suffered a knee injury in Monday's workout. The Trojans said their two starting guards, Bob Peviani and Box Cox, are unable to practice, Peviani because he has the flu, and Cox because he has a hip joint injury.

LaSalle '5' Still Tops On National Poll

NEW YORK (AP)—Undefeated La Salle of Philadelphia held the No. 1 position in the Associated Press college basketball poll today, but pressure is mounting.

The Explorers return this week end to Madison Square Garden, scene of their National Invitation triumph last winter, to play in the eight-team Holiday Tournament. Against the select field they put their eight-game winning streak in jeopardy.

La Salle opens he ournamen against highly regarded De Paul in one of the afternoon quarterfinal games. Others in the event, ending Tuesday, are Manhattan, Cincinnati, St. John's of Brooklyn, Miami (Ohio), New York University and Utah State.

La Salle won first place in the poll for the second straight week by getting 28 of the 77 first-place votes cast by sportswriters. This gave them 630 points, on the basis of 10 for a first-place vote, 9 for second, etc. They barely shaded Illinois, which had 577 points and 12 first-placd votes.

Others in the top 10 are Seton Hall, Holy Cross, Kansas State, North Carolina State, Washington, Louisiana State, Oklahoma A&M and Western Kentucky.

Famous Statue To Get Cleanup

LONDON (AP)—The famous statue of Eros—winged god of love—that usually stands on tiptoe in the center of London's Piccadilly Circus—will be spending Christmas away from the city's crowds.

Workmen took the statue off its pedestal yesterday and carted him off for a cleanup. They also plan to repair the fountain over which he stands and install a new water system in it before the coronation of Queen Elizabeth II June 2.

Oil Firms Plan Canada Venture

CLEVELAND (AP) — Sohio Petroleum Co. and Socony-Vacuum Exploration Co. plan to start oil drilling operations on five million acres of land in Saskatchewan.

Under the contract approved by the Saskatchewan Bureau of Natural Resources, Socony-Vacuum will serve as operating manager for the project expected to exceed $10 million in the next three years.

Sokolsky's

Americans failed to vote during the Roosevelt years, was that many could not get themselves to vote for Roosevelt or against him.

Even in those years, there was criticism of the American press for being so wrong about Roosevelt. But the press was not wrong. It is not the function of the press to be on the winning or even the popular side.

If it were, all the press would need to do would be to gauge public opinion and act accordingly like an actor in vaudeville who changes his joke to conform to the tastes of a particular audience.

Some of the greatest men have said the right things at the wrong time and got hissed for it.

For instance, William Jennings Bryan ran three times for the Presidency and was defeated each time; he was Secretary of State under Woodrow Wilson and was ridiculed for his efforts. Yet, his entire program, including the 16 to 1 ratio between silver and gold, was adopted in due course, with some dire results. The man failed, but his ideas persisted.

Newspapers and newspaper men that court popularity by revising their ideas to meet the ebb and flow of public fashion lose their value as instruments of leadership, even if temporarily they may gain in popularity. A free press fights for what it believes to be right.

590 Road Deaths Seen For Holiday

CHICAGO (AP) — Motor travel over the four-day Christmas week end may kill 590 persons, the National Safety Council estimated today.

The estimate covers traffic deaths occurring between 6 p.m. Wednesday and midnight Sunday.

The council cautioned against driving in bad weather and against driving after drinking. It advised those who must drive to start early, take it easy and allow extra driving time for bad weather.

Although many types of insects produce silk, natural silk for making cloth is made exclusively from the cocoons of the mulberry silk moth.

Hoyt Wilhelm Is Top Hurler In National

NEW YORK (AP)—Hoyt Wilhelm, New York Giants' freshman relief hurler and Philadelphia's Robin Roberts copped most of the National League pitching honors according to official statistics released today.

Wilhelm becomes the first rookie in National League history to lead both in earned runs and won-and-lost percentage the same year.

The 29-year - old knuckleballer gave up 43 earned runs in 159 innings for a 2.43 ERA to finish ahead of the 2.58 mark produced by Chicago's Warren Hacker.

The Giants' righthander won 15 games and lost three for a league-leading .833 percentage. He is the 11th NL pitcher to win the earned run and winning percentage titles the same season. The latter crown is based on 15 decisions.

Roberts, who finished third in the earned run race at 2.59, won the most games, 28, the first time a National Leaguer had come up with that many victories since Dizzy Dean of St. Louis chalked up 28 triumphs in 1935.

The hard-working Philadelphia hurler also set the pace in most games started, 37, most complete games, 30 and most innings pitched, 330. He also faced the most batmen, 1,310, and gave up the most hits, 92.

AKRON (AP)—Two seven-year-old boys drowned Monday when they crashed through thin ice covering a shallow pond.

Postoffice Digs Way Out Of Mail Avalanche On Schedule

Job Increased By Odd Ways Of Customers

Envelopes Showing Deceased Address Add To Puzzles

Circleville Postmaster A. Hulse Hays indicated late Monday local postal workers feel they're past the full weight of the Christmas rush—but he offered fresh evidence that the mailing public still expects miracles of those who handle the parcels, papers, letters and cards.

The flood of parcels for the Yuletide mail began over a week ago here and was expected to continue heavy "almost up until the last minute," as the forgetful and tardy folks try to beat the deadline.

Figures confirmed, however, that outgoing letters and cards are tapering off from a high point hit last Wednesday.

Strangely enough, the volume of cards mailed from Circleville this Christmastide has been far under last year's estimated total No routine count is made of outgoing parcels.

The city post office handled approximately 280,000 outgoing letters and cards from Dec. 10 to Dec. 22, inclusive, last year. This year, the estimated total for letters and cards over the same period was 249,000, a drop of 31,000.

• • •

"THERE'S NO way to explain it," postal workers said. "Christmas mail figures are always erratic. We don't know why people didn't seem to go heavy on cards this Christmas."

But Postmaster Hays showed several samples of mail that kept his staff workers talking to themselves, even with the letter-card decline.

Leading the list of how-do-you-deliver-this-one classics were a number of letters and cards to Circleville residents who have been dead for some time. One, a special delivery, was addressed to a woman deceased for several years!

Addresses to the living also presented a problem when, as in one case, they read "Mr. and Mrs. Smith, Circleville"—and nothing more.

Or, more in the old hometown friendly spirit, the envelope that was addressed to "Mary and Aunt Alice, Circleville."

"Mary and Aunt Alice," however, were able to have that one delivered through a secret system which the postmaster laughingly declined to explain. He said he discovered it was intended for Mary Heffner of E. Mound St.

A large number of letters and cards never stood a chance at delivery because of hopelessly inadequate addresses, and a surprising number—even considering the Yuletide rush—tried to dodge past without stamps.

• • •

THEN, TOO, some folks tried to use small corners from torn stamps—apparently the result of the great American habit of "stamping cards all at once" while looking the other direction.

Circleville's postmaster pointed out three-quarters of a torn stamp can be approved, but a number of envelopes showed up carrying only the remaining fraction.

One the face of the envelope the stamps roamed far and wide, at times moving into the corner intended for the return address. Some, who used one-cent stamps, caused extra work at the post office by stringing them across the top of the envelope through the postmark spot. A clear postmark is required on each envelope, Hays explained.

Decorative seals of reasonable size are permitted on the front of the envelope during December, he added, but at other times they must be placed on the back—and seals on the front rarely make a postal worker happy, even in December.

"High day" for outgoing letters and cards this Christmas, barring an unexpected new record on Tuesday or Wednesday, was Dec. 17 both this year and last—another strange quirk in the Circleville Christmas mail totals. And last Wednesday's drop from the top day for the 1951 Christmas rush reflected the same decline shown by the more complete tally.

Letters and cards on Dec. 17 last year totaled about 50,000. This year's approximate figure for the same "high day" was 33,000.

As for the ebb tide—incoming letters and cards that pack the mailman's pouch along with the smaller parcels—figures can't tell the story nearly as well as a North Court Street carrier who spoke for all his co-workers while climbing a flight of steps downtown.

"The big bunions are growing little ones," he said, "but we're over the hump—I hope."

Tobacco Quotas Favored Strongly

WASHINGTON (AP)—The Agriculture Department reported Monday that official returns on a burley tobacco marketing quota referendum held Nov. 22 show that 98.3 per cent of the growers voting favored such controls.

Accordingly, burley crops for the next three years will be produced and marketed under rigid marketing quotas designed to prevent over-production.

Federal Road Aid To Ohio May Be Lost

COLUMBUS (AP)—A highway department official said Monday Ohio stands to lose $27 million in federal funds for badly needed roads unless it puts up an equal sum.

John Heier, chief planning engineer of the highway department, made the report at a meeting called by Gov. Frank J. Lausche to discuss road financing problems with contractors and the highway user groups.

He said $47 million in federal funds are available to the state but that Ohio has only $20 million in sight next year for matching. Some of the federal money will expire next year unless the state matches it, he added:

"These funds to be utilized," Heier said, "must be matched dollar for dollar through funds available to the state within the required time or the state will lose the unmatched funds."

Heier estimated Ohio will have $16½ million available in 1953 for road construction purposes. Another $3½ million will come in from cities and counties to bring the total to about $20 million.

'White Christmas' Can Only Be Dream For Men In Korea

Famous Song Links Wishes Across Miles

Tragedy Of Struggle Seen Clearest In Yuletide Season

By ED McCANN
Herald Staff Writer

News item—"In Korea, snow is falling tonight."

The small makeshift radio, tucked away with its batteries near the head of one of the two bunks, seemed to be whispering to itself in the darkness.

Then, suddenly, a lighter snapped several times, flared, and cautiously passed its glow to a candle down behind a pile of ammo boxes on the dirt floor of the dugout.

In the weird lighting were etched the tired features of two youthful and dirty faces, silently intent beneath rumped hair and bundled around the chin with blankets that stretched into the gloom on both sides.

Only the eyes of the pair, aside from the restless shadows and the candle's flame, showed motion — hypnotized most of the time by the wobbling light, but turning also to the rickety radio, and a few times in nervous glances toward the other end of the dismal hole atop a Korean ridge.

• • •

FINALLY an arm reached out from one of the blankets toward the radio, accidentally bumping the sandbagged wall and loosening a bit of soil that disturbed the candle.

"See if you can get that other station, Joe. They often have good organ music, and tonight they'll have Christmas Eve music, too."

Joe fingered the dials on the set for a moment in silence. Then he brushed the edge of the blanket away from his mouth and said:

"That's the station we heard mention Pickaway County."

"I don't think it was Pickaway, Joe. You were sitting clear over by the door and I was lots closer—me and that signal fellow. Remember?"

"I heard it clear," Joe said. "It was something about Pickaway County. And he mentioned Circleville, too."

Over in the opposite end of the bunker, canvas hanging in the entrance bulged far inward, waging a constant battle against a bitter gale. Every now and then the howling Winter wind found tiny openings and threw a spray of white inside. The floor around the entrance was white now, and ice on the inside of the canvas glittered in the dim reflected candlelight.

Joe was still trying.

"Keep it low though, Joe. I forgot to tell you that brown-beak from CP was snooping around yesterday while you were helping gather up that medic kid. Said he had strict orders—"

• • •

"YOU MEAN odors," Joe interrupted. "The guy was chicken when we left Frisco and he's still chicken. He'll always be chicken."

"Sure, sure, Joe. You're right. But he said he had strict orders about radios. They blame a radio, you know, for that deal over in Able Company last week. And then when he found our batteries, he started getting sore and—hold it! Don't move your hand!"

"It was only static whining," Joe granted. "Go on, what did brown-beak say?"

"No it wasn't static, Joe. Turn it back to your left, easy—real easy. Listen!"

Joe listened. They both listened. And even the wind for a moment seemed to pause in its struggle at the entrance. Faintly at first but gaining volume the music came. Joe's fingers finally moved to another dial—and then the arm withdrew under his blankets. A girl somewhere—a real girl—was singing:

"I'm dreaming of a white Christmas, just like the ones I used to know. . . ."

"Where do you suppose she's from, Joe?"

"Who knows? Nice, isn't it? I remember the first night I heard it. A bunch of us kids traveled over to a party in Saltcreek. They were giving some of the GI's a sendoff and they played it on a piano and a cute kid sang it. Often wondered what became of her. A little blonde. From Chilli, I think."

"Where the treetops glisten, and children listen to hear sleigh bells in the snow. . . ."

"Ever ride a real sleigh, Joe? Some kids over in Darbyville used to get one out and bring it over to our place. We took it up to Columbus once."

"Darbyville? You know some kids in Darbyville? Ever up around Commercial Point?"

"No—that is, not to stay. An uncle of mine went hunting up that way one Fall and I went along, but we didn't know anybody. Did you ever—hey Joe, better ease it down a little. Satchel told me the last time he stood guard he could hear it down the slope clear as anything."

Joe turned it down.

"I'm dreaming of a white Christmas, with every Christmas card I write. . . ."

"Suppose we'll get any mail, Joe?"

"I dunno. Funny thing, me getting that picture from the girl in Dayton. I swear her place looked just like a farm up near Ringgold. Next time I write I'm going to ask her. Lots of folks from Dayton come over to Pickaway County, huh?"

"Yeah, I guess so, Joe. Maybe."

"May your days be merry and bright—and may all your Christmases be white."

The station faded out and both boys were silent, listening. But the wind had risen again to tussle with the canvas, and snow beat softly against the outside of the entrance covering. Even the candle behind the ammo boxes was fretful—and seemingly tired. Awfully tired, like the eyes that watched its flame dance and flutter above the melting wax.

"Might as well sleep, Joe. It's late, and I don't think she'll sing it again anyway—even if we could get it."

• • •

"LET'S LEAVE it on for awhile in the dark and listen. Maybe it'll come back."

"Okay."

So they snuffed the candle and lay listening in the darkness, nearly all but their ears buried under blankets. Probably an hour or so passed, and over on the other side of the world, in happier lands, Christmas Day was dawning.

By that time—aside from the rustle of the canvas and the moan of the wind — heavy breathing from the two bunks was the only sound.

The little radio set was silent. Silent, that is, until all the sounds of a troubled night finally subsided in reverence for the approach of a mystical morning.

And then, just before the cold gray crept across the Korean mountains—while the forms in the bunks were still and even the heavy canvas hung motionless—the set regained its faint, melodious voice.

It was almost as though someone far, far away—through some heavenly gift of wish and prayer—had found a way to speak on just that morning to the boys in their sleep. Because sleep they did while another girl—a real girl somewhere—sang softly and with all her heart:

"I'm dreaming of a white Christmas. . . ."

May you and your family enjoy one of the most glorious Yule seasons ever.

Expensive Gear Not Needed For Good Holiday Pictures

Things have been made easier for local residents who want to take indoor pictures of their Christmas trees and family gatherings without having the time or inclination to learn much about photography.

Dwight Radcliff, chairman of the Pumpkin Show Amateur Photography Contest, has offered a few suggestions for the inexperienced.

In addition to his work during the annual Pumpkin Show, young Radcliff serves as official photographer for Pickaway County sheriff's office.

Theme of his advice is that no expensive equipment or elaborate layout is needed to snap pictures during the Christmas festivities—a time that always has experiences that can never come in the same way again.

Radcliff has anticipated several questions which could be asked by inexperienced photographers and lists the answers he would give. Those planning to preserve their holiday fun through interior photographs may follow these tips:

• • •

Q—WHAT general advice can you give for a fellow who just wants to take some indoor pictures during the holidays and doesn't want to spend too much money?

A—If you can borrow a tripod for your camera, use it. Almost invariably it will give you a better picture when the photographer has the time to make a few preparations.

Those taking a picture of their Christmas tree, probably the favorite shot for this season, should get fairly good results by opening the lens of the camera and keeping it open while they count to about five or six. The tree's own lights should be sufficient lighting in most cases.

If no tripod is available for such a picture, I'd suggest the photographer get a flood lamp or two and place them at the side or sides of the camera, throwing the lighting directly onto the object to be photographed. Flood lamps aren't nearly as expensive as many people believe.

The photographer may prefer to get a camera with a flash attachment. There are a number of good flash camera types in the lower price range at the local stores.

In placing flood lamps, care should be taken so that the position of the lamps is not causing glare from the object you're photographing. To check on this, sight at the object from the level of your camera position. A glare that may not show while you're standing erect may be a glare to your camera, placed on tripod or some other solid base to permit the time exposure.

• • •

IF YOU'RE using a flash attachment on your camera, get down at an angle and don't shoot directly into that portion of the object which might cause glare, or reflection. In the case of the flash method, this has to be figured out in advance since the glare won't show until the bulb flashes.

Q—Supposing I'm considering purchase of a camera chiefly because I want Christmas pictures and may not have much use for it except at intervals after the holidays? Is it a good idea to get fairly expensive equipment anyway, with the idea that I may as well get "good pictures while the getting is good?"

A—No. In such a case I'd advise a small, cheap camera with a flash attachment to take the pictures you have in mind at this time. Then it's still good if you want to become interested in photography and, as you continue to learn, you can gradually work into more expensive cameras. Too many people start off with expensive camera and film-developing layouts and then discover they're not interested in photography after all.

Q—Some amateurs fear their flash bulbs will burst in the face of the subject. Do you think there's much danger of this and if so, what can be done about it?

A—I never use a flash guard myself, but it is true the bulbs burst now and then and it can be a serious accident when it happens on a close-up picture. However, I've heard of very few bulbs bursting in this manner. For those who want to feel confident on this point, an inexpensive flash guard can be purchased at the local camera shop. Many bulbs crack in flashing, but very few burst into pieces.

Q—What would you say is the most common mistake made by amateur photographers — the fellows who only use a camera at a time like Christmas or during some similar festivities?

• • •

A—CAMERA movement, which gives that blurred movement to a picture. If you're not using a tripod or something similar for a time exposure—that is, leaving the lens open for a few seconds—be sure to hold the camera as steady as possible. One common practice is to press it against your face while snapping the shutter, or against your body while you hold your breath if it happens to be a type that is sighted in that way. Improper lighting is another frequent fault.

In addition to the way the light is hitting the subject, be sure to have sufficient lighting for a good picture. And many times the light can be misleading, seeming to be enough to your own eye but insufficient for the camera. It's been said that hundreds of pictures are under-exposed (not enough light) for every one that's given too much light. But of course you can go too far either way.

Q—Almost any amateur cameraman knows the disappointment of taking a picture of a person who wears glasses and then finding the lighting happened to "hit them right in the eye". On this detail what's a good precaution?

A—The precaution for this is just about the same as it is for avoiding a shot directly at a surface that can cause glare or reflection. In using a time exposure with house lighting or flood lamps, a careful check can usually avoid this fault before the picture is snapped.

Looking at the subject from your camera position, you'll usually be able to tell whether anyone's glasses are being "hit" square. Changing the light position, or the subject's, should solve this. When using a flash camera, try to shoot at an angle, and from above or below the level of the glasses.

Q—Supposing I'd like to try some color pictures at Christmas time and have little experience in camera work? Or supposing I'm just considering "going in" for photography and would like to start with color shots? Do you see any objection to the idea?

A—I wouldn't advise any beginner to bother with color photography unless he or she has had a good opportunity to learn the art with black-and-white shots. Otherwise it can be too expensive and discouraging for the average person. Also, before you begin taking color photographs I'd advise getting a camera that has a 3.5 lens or better.

Beginners in color work should get a color guide at their camera shop or elsewhere and study the information it gives before pictures are actually taken. Lighting for color is much different than lighting for black-and-white.

South Korea Due To Crawl With Santas Christmas Day

SEOUL (AP)—War - beaten South Korea will be crawling with Santa Clauses Christmas Day. And under each snowy beard there'll be the smile of a United Nations soldier—a tough guy in battle but a softie where kids are concerned.

Thousands of Korean boys and girls are going to get the works Christmas Day — toys, candies and warm clothing.

It appears that the Allied fighting men, in an effort to ease the ache of Christmas loneliness far from home, are planning to make the day one that the Korean youngsters long will remember.

There'll be hundreds of parties for the kids; something will be doing wherever United Nations troops are stationed.

Most of the volunteer Santa Clauses will be U. S. soldiers, but it isn't strictly a U. S. undertaking. The British Commonwealth Division is also remembering the waifs of war with which Korea abounds.

Stacked in tents and quonset huts at almost every Army and Air Force station are thousands of toys. Tough first sergeants are getting into Santa Claus suits and practicing. Oil - stained mechanics are decorating khaki jeeps with wooden reindeer antlers and red bunting.

Privates and colonels are winding up toy trains and automobiles; of course, they make sure the toys are in good order.

Since the Korean war started United Nations units have adopted countless children left homeless by the fighting and destruction. Soldiers who have seen the heartbreak of war gladly open their pockets to support orphanages all over South Korea. But Christmas calls for something more — something from the heart as well as the pocketbook.

Frontline divisions, engineer outfits, medical units, transportation troops and soldiers and Marines scattered from the front south to Pusan are having parties.

The 11th Marine Regiment adopted a whole village. Every child there will receive a toy and a sweater, bought by Maj. Robert M. Jenkins, Jacksonville, N. C., who was sent to Japan to get them.

A U. S. 2nd Division soldier got his hometown of Klamath Falls, Ore., to help out. Sfc. Caydon P. Gwyn, 23, wrote his mother and she went to her church with the problem. As the result about 90 youngsters at the Friendship Home Orphanage near Kapyong will have toys, candy, a full Christmas dinner and plenty of warm clothes.

The 2nd Division built the orphanage, along with others, when it was near Kapyong and saw the plight of the many homeless children.

U. S. 7th Division men are decorating trucks as Santa Claus sleighs and six task forces, each with its dressed-up Santa Claus, is prepared to descend on 14 villages Christmas Day.

These are just a few of the things the service men have planned. Almost every unit, large or small, is helping one way or another. One unit near Seoul has collected a batch of Walt Disney motion picture cartoons to entertain Korean moppets.

Another unit is reported planning parties and gifts of their own for smaller groups.

Gathered pockets in a little girl's dress will puff up nicely after laundering, if you stuff them with clean tissue paper while ironing.

13 FELLOW crewmen aboard a B-29 returning to Okinawa from a bombing mission over Korea can thank Ernest Gorris (above), Glassport, Pa., for the best Christmas present they ever received—he saved their lives and his own. Gorris, 22, defused a live bomb with a 60-second fuse which had lodged in the bomb bay. It took him 28 seconds. In another 32 bomb would have blown plane to smithereens. (International)

Cave Man Really Only Youngster

NEW YORK (AP) — Evidence that ancestors of modern man in Europe are perhaps 35,000 years younger than previously believed was presented to an International Symposium on Anthropology here recently.

A new study, based on radioactive carbon content of charred human bones, indicates that the cave man was extinct in Europe by 1,300 B. C. It was presented by Dr. Kenneth Page Oakley, geologist of the British Museum of Natural History.

Earlier estimates had placed decline of cave cultures and beginnings of modern European civilization somewhere between 200 and 500 centuries B. C., with most authorities accepting the latter figure as more probable.

Familiar Old Friend Sends Greetings—And Reminder

"Never a Christmas morning,
"Never the old year ends,
"But somebody thinks of someone,
"Old days, old times — old friends."

And that, after all, is the only reason for this piece as churches all over Pickaway County prepare for their Christmas services. The bond that must always live for "old days, old times—old friends."

Many of you have probably never really listened to me, and I know for sure that most of you have never seen me. But at this time of year I've always felt closer to your dreams—wherever you are and whatever you may be doing. I thought it best therefore, at this season, to add one more little greeting and to sign it:

"Just from an old friend who watched you grow, and now wonders where you've gone."

Me? Gee, I'm not important. I'm just an oldtime organ in a little old-fashioned church. And the "where" is even less important. Somewhere perhaps right near you. Perhaps in some other section of the county. Or perhaps beyond, even beyond Ohio—and in maybe a few cases, beyong America's shores as well.

I don't feel backward sending you this note,you see, because I know you well.

When you first went to church alongside the older folks, with your big lace collar or starched little dress and shiny nose, I watched you walk up the middle aisle and hummed a low melody while you were led to a seat with the rest of the family.

Gee whiz, kiddo, you were sort of comical the way you sat up in your seat—straight as a poker and never glancing right or left. Even the sun that played with colors through the window pane seemed to smile as it lit up your hair—combed or brushed as though a surveyor did it with instruments.

You were all a carefree crowd in those days, and I'm afraid you seemed a bit hurried now and then on your way out of services. Nobody frowned though.

They understood, and I—well—I played the marching hymn to give you a break. You probably don't remember.

Maybe you noticed me more though when grade school years passed into the time of high school. You began to pick your own clothes then, I could tell it. And sometimes the boys and girls would walk down the aisle together—both of them so particular about their etiquette that some of the older folks in the choir looked down and smiled, knowing-like.

Then, as the years passed along, I hummed the wedding march for some of the same youngsters who once came to church with their parents, aunts or uncles. They were excited during the wedding to notice how I put in all the mellow trills and followed along softly with the bass. But I didn't mind. I knew.

Some people react funny to weddings. Everybody isn't gay, like you'd think they would be. Relatives and old friends of the bride and groom sometimes get pretty serious before it's over.

Now and then when you grown-up kids would walk back down the aisle between the ribbons and with everybody watching you, I'd get sor of rattled myself. That's when I'd miss a pipe-note or two and the choir members would laugh, nervous like, and say:

"Even the old organ's getting sentimental about it."

But of course that wasn't so. It was just that I needed a bit more wind for a moment or slipped on one of the chords, that was all. "Sentimental?" Bosh!

Then of course there were other days when I hummed only the solemn pieces, and somehow or other people paid more attention to me then.

The church would be hushed except for my melodies and the low voice of the pastor with his requiem. There would be special prayers, and perhaps a draped flag and honor guard. I've seen a good many flags since you were a kid, you know.

Things would seem extra quiet when the folks would file out into the aisle, dressed in black. It wasn't always proper, maybe, but I'd try to hum as loud as I could then. It seemed the best thing to do.

So believe me, you youngster with the grown-up ways—and fancy hair-dos or not as much as you used to have! I've watched you grow through the decades of a life filled with thrilling things. I've sung over old songs in the background while you've turned over and over in your mind the urge of a cherished ambition.

My music has wished you courage when you dropped in at the old church before leaving in brave search of that goal—or just because you couldn't stay.

If you came back, lonesome, dejected and even broken-hearted, I've hummed new hope between the notes of the hymns you always liked the best. And when you returned successful, and admiring friends gathered around you, I've been content to watch from the dim-lit choir loft. And to give a merry lilt to the oldtime numbers picked for the day.

So you see I've tried to be a loyal friend while you've moved ahead to meet life's promises and problems. More than that, I've tried to symbolize for you the very spirit of oldtime friendships — consoling without preaching in times of adversity, giving unselfish praise in the hours of your highest achievements.

"Old days, old times and old friends" are like that, you know. And on Christmas morning, wherever you are, you should remember it.

You shouldn't have to be reminded by the oldtime organ in the little old-fashioned church!

Bacteria Used As Guinea Pigs In Cattle Test

A scientist at Ohio Agricultural Experiment Station is studying animal nutrition by using bacteria as "guinea pigs" in the laboratory.

C. H. Hunt of the station's animal science department said today the bacteria reveal, among other things, the amount of vitamins and proteins they can make available from the feed a cow consumes. If bacteria are unable to make vitamins and proteins available, the feed probably is poor.

"We take a sample of the liquid portion from the cow's rumen, or first stomach," Hunt said, "and place it in an artificial stomach containing good and poor nutritional substances. If the bacteria react favorably, then we know the ration has good possibilities and results can be transferred to the animal laboratory, for further investigation.

"If the bacteria fail to grow, then we know that something is missing. That's where our investigation begins."

• • •

BACTERIA need vitamins, minerals, and proteins to live just as animals do, Hunt said. Their big advantage in the laboratory is that they give answers to testing experiments much faster than rats or other small animals do.

Kept in a test tube at a low temperature, the bacteria cost very little, require less attention. When some are needed in a project, Hunt warms them up in an oven, then suspends them in a salt solution where they are ready to go to work.

One of the big problems in animal nutrition, Hunt said, is to put something in the rumen or first stomach to produce more microorganisms which, in turn, will digest more crude fibre. This digestion produces more vitamins and protein for animals' use.

"That's the secret of getting more milk and meat from our cattle," he said. "Now, laboratory bacteria are pointing the way."

A razor blade is better than scissors for cutting smooth, clean buttonholes in heavy fabric. To protect the table surface beneath, place the section of the fabric being cut over a bar of soap.

Story Of Santa Claus Is Handed Down Through Sixteen Centuries

By CENTRAL PRESS

Santa Claus in America is a heritage handed down through 16 centuries and by way of many lands.

The good St. Nicholas lived and performed great deeds among the poor in the Holy Land in the Fourth Century A. D. For his works he was consecrated Archbishop of Myra.

Dutch settlers first brought their version of St. Nicholas as connected with Christmas to America.

From a lean and severe theologian, St. Nicholas became a rotund, merry fellow, much more of a human provider of good things than a mitred saint.

His robes of the church and his donkey were traded in the early American concept for fur and red suit and the team of reindeer. In New Amsterdam on the Hudson, the Dutch name Santa Nikolaas was shortened for future Americans to Santa Klaus.

* * *

AT ONCE there was a resemblance between the pictured Santa Claus and the robust Father Knickerbocker. It was cartoonist Thomas Nash who gave Nineteenth Century New York, and the world, its now universally accepted figure of Santa as a white-bearded old fellow in ermine-trimmed, red coat.

In a twinkle he was welcomed as half Father Knickerbocker and half merry King Cole of legend.

For the picture of Santa Claus in words, the world is obligated to Dr. Clement Clarke Moore, who in 1822 was professor of divinity at New York Theological seminary Two nights before Christmas in that year, Dr. Moore told his children of "The Visit of St. Nicholas"

From that night forward, American children have thrilled to the dream of the Christmas Eve arrival of "a miniature sleigh and eight tiny reindeer, with a little old driver so lively and quick."

Dr. Moore's Santa was "dressed all in furs from his head to his foot" as he dropped down the chimney with "a bundle of toys he had flung on his back."

In Dr. Moore's verse "the stockings were hung by the chimney with care," since a legend which is lost in antiquity, had St. Nicholas dropping gold coins down a chimney one night. It so happened that they fell into a stocking which had been left by the fireside to dry.

Gifts which crowded Santa in "the sleigh full of toys and St. Nicholas, too," naturally came to be a part of the American Christmas through the presents brought by the Wise Men to the infant King in Bethlehem.

And thus, 1,602 years after those first gifts, the toys for American children in 1952 are estimated to run to a value of $400 million.

This year's "space" toys are far different from the gold, frankincense and myrrh offered by the Magi, but the spirit of joy and good tidings remains.

Newer to the American Christmas scene is the greeting card. It first appeared in London in 1846 but it was fathered in this country by Louis Prang of Boston in only 1875. The predictions are that billions of cards will express American Christmas wishes this year. This will be three times the similar exchange in 1931 and will reach a retail sale of $100 million.

Red Guerrillas Losing Ground

KUALA LUMPUR, Malaya (AP) —High Commissioner Sir Gerald Templer told resettled squatters at Temerloh, Pahang state, the battle against Communist guerrillas is taking a turn for the better.

"There are fewer Chinese, Indian and Malay civilians being murdered. We are capturing far more arms and ammunition than we lose. Fewer buses are being burned. There is little interference with the railway, and fewer rubber trees are being slashed," he said.

Requirements Lax To Drive

SOUTHBRIDGE, Mass. — (AP) — South Dakota is the only state that requires no examination, issues no license and sets no legal standard for automobile drivers, according to the 1952 edition of a survey of state requirements for motor vehicle operators All that is required is that the driver be at least 15.

The survey, published by the American Optical Co., says that all other states require licenses and have driver examinations. Age requirements for drivers range from 14 in Arkansas, Idaho, New Mexico, North Dakota, South Carolina and Texas to a high of 17 in New Jersey.

Wounded List Lowers Morale

HONG KONG—(AP) — Communist army morale has been dropping as casualties in Korea increase, reports the independently owned Kung Sheung Daily News.

The paper said Red authorities have isolated wounded soldiers from troops who have never seen Korea. A ban on visitors to army hospitals in Canton has been ordered recently by the commander of the South China military area.

For seasoning in the French manner, sprinkle a bit of nutmeg in white mashed potatoes. This should be added in moderation, for a subtle, distinctive flavor.

AMERICAN SOLDIERS on the fighting front in Korea have plenty of Christmas spirit despite the fact that the enemy's big guns are booming in the distance. The camouflage netting (top) may hide their position from the Communists but Santa Claus has no trouble spotting their hideout. Jumping the gun on opening their packages (top, l. to r.) are: Cpl. DEAN'S POTATO CHIPS

ONCE UPON A CHRISTMAS EVE

By WILLIAM RITT

NOW ESKI, as well as the reindeer are lost, since no one knows the way back to Santa's headquarters. "Bad," says Dasher. "Worse," says Dancer. "Awful," says Prancer. Little Eski is too busy worrying to say anything.

HIGH in the sky the Storm King and Jack Frost look down and see the sad little group. "We ought to help," says the Storm King. "We must help," answers Jack Frost, "and I have an idea how we can do it!"

THE STORM KING shapes one of his snow clouds in the form of a hand, the forefinger pointing in the right direction to Santa Claus Headquarters. All day long Eski and the reindeer follow the sign until it is too dark to see.

JACK FROST twists icicles so that, glittering in the moonlight, they, too, point the way. It's the Day Before the Day Before Christmas. Will they get there in time? Hurry, Eski! Hurry, Reindeer! (To Be Concluded)

Observance Of Christmas Dates Back 1,602 Years To Pope Julius

By CENTRAL PRESS

Christmas Day as celebrated on December 25 in America is a religious heritage traced back 1,602 years to Pope Julius I.

For three centuries after the birth of Jesus there was no one day fixed for the universal observance of the Mass of Christ.

Accordingly, the Roman pontiff ordered an investigation by St. Cyril to determine the day and month of Christ's birth. Pope Julius I, after great deliberation, established December 25 as Christmas beginning in the year 350 A. D.

Foremost sacred symbol of the American Christmas, the creche or lowly manger of the Christ Child, reminds us that on December 25 we are celebrating a birthday.

* * *

THIS YEAR, instead of being the generally imagined 1,952nd birthday of the Saviour, is most likely His 1,956th.

Roman records tell us it was in the year 4 B. C. that Caesar Augustus decreed the whole world should be taxed. Hence it was in that year, rather than in 1 A. D., when Joseph and Mary went to Bethlehem and Christ was born in a stable.

Merry Christmas as the American form of greeting is a reflection of the tidings of great joy handed down to us through the centuries and other languages of the Christian world. Everywhere today the same sentiment is expressed. Good Holidays in Portuguese, Good Christmas in Italian, Merry Yule in Finnish, Good Yule in Swedish, and Joyous Christmas in French.

Thus always a deeply implanted symbol of man's freedom and happy rebirth, Christmas naturally grew to be celebrated in music and song.

The earliest Christmas chants drew on the Bible. "Behold I bring you good tidings of great joy—for unto you is born this day in the city of David a Saviour."

The first carol, as we know this type of Christmas music today, however, is credited to St. Francis of Assisi, who lived at the beginning of the Thirteenth Century.

Martin Luther, 300 years after St. Francis, followed the pattern set by the Roman Catholic church. The Protestant reformer wrote his carol for his children. "Away in a manger, No crib for His bed, The little Lord Jesus lay down His Sweet head."

The Christmas tree as the center of our American festivities is credited by legend to this same Martin Luther.

IT IS definitely traced, however, to Germany in the beginning of the Seventeenth Century, since when its thrilling symbol of Christmas has lasted as a thing of joy for children.

The trimmed tree was introduced into England by the German husband of Queen Victoria a little over 100 years ago. Shortly before that, German immigrants had brought it to America.

A star-studded German night one Christmas Eve, seen by Martin Luther, is the legendary explanation for our custom of hanging candles and lights on our American Christmas trees.

For the large star atop our decorated trees, there is, of course, the symbolic light which guided the Wise Men to the place of the Nativity.

Putting Finish On Beef Gives Higher Profits

Putting finish on beef cattle will pay feeders, an extension economist and a beef cattle specialist in Ohio State University reports.

James H. Warner, extension specialist in animal science, said he has heard comments which indicate some "scare-selling" by feeders. "They may be picking them too green," Warner said.

Mervin G. Smith, extension economist, agreed cattle feeders may be selling because of price weakness. "Low grades have dropped more in price than better grades he pointed out.

The specialists agreed top prices are for well-finished cattle. As downward pressures go to work in the cattle market, the spread in prices between grades becomes greater.

Warner said some cattle are going to market for 28 cents a pound, when the top in Ohio is around 35 cents. The difference in many cases is poor finish.

* * *

SMITH SAID feeders who market cattle without enough finish are hurting themselves in two ways. These cattle will sell at lower grades and bring less money. They also will increase marketings and "beat prices down."

Supply of unfinished cattle is larger and will bring less per pound than finished cattle. Finishing cattle pays, but holding cattle after they are finished will not pay.

A good way to disinfect your vacuum cleaner is to sprinkle some moth crystals over the rugs, and then run the cleaner over them. This will also protect the rugs to some extent from moths.

Beavers Eying The Mississippi

DAVENPORT, Ia. (AP) — Some bold beavers seem to have bitten off more than they can chew in setting out to dam the Mississippi River at Credit Island Park here, naturalists say.

Beavers usually cut small saplings with tender bark for food. And they usually fell big trees only for dams. Since the only thing to dam at Credit Island is the broad Mississippi, naturalists say that must be what the beavers have in mind.

The industrious little animals with the wood-cutter teeth already have felled a number of big trees into the water, some up to three feet in diameter. To save the park's other trees, park employes have daubed the trunks with some stuff that doesn't taste good to beavers.

Jenkins Explains How Santa Feels As Target For Kiddies

Santa Claus has been having such an up-and-down time of it in the five-and-dime store here that well-wishers had to caution him it could take the bulge out of his famous ront.

During a casual check on the jolly old fellow's routine, amid a Saturday afternoon Yuletide shopping rush, he bent over to hear whispered requests about eight times in 30 seconds.

Seeing as how each conference with a little boy or girl requires a bit of private discussion, and how every now and then the huddle requires some coaxing, this is vigorous belt-line exercise.

So much so that the fine old gent from the North Pole has to pause now and then to check his vertebrae for kinks. It was during one of these "breathers" that Don Jenkins, who knows Santa Claus very, very well, explained how it might feel to be the center for countless little questions and the target for bright eyes with a special sparkle.

Santa, of course, saves most of his talking only for those who come from all over Pickaway County and beyond to tell him their hopes for Yuletide morning. But his very good friend, Jenkins, explained it all started here many years ago—this arrangement used in Circleville to have Santa greet his beaming followers.

• • •

AS ALL GOOD boys and girls know, Jenkins explained, Santa Claus gets around awfully fast to keep his many dates, and sometimes a trick reflection makes it look as though he's even two places at the same time—for instance when he's in the five-and-dime and a store down the street has him on a television screen.

Nevertheless the Chamber of Commerce decided long ago (Jenkins himself was about 12 years old at the time) that it was a good idea for Santa to circulate around Court and Main in person, and so he did—wearing a coatt that wasn't so fancy, and a beard that was downright inadequate.

Furthermore, things being like they were in those days, Santa couldn't get all the candy he needed for his friends and had to coax the local candy merchants to furnish a free supply.

At the present time, incidentally, Santa Claus is well supplied with candy for those who come to see him. On days immediately before Christmas, he hopes to be at his regular spot in the five-and-dime from 2 p. m. to 4 p. m. and from 7 p. m. to 9 p. m., except for Wednesday night—Christmas Eve—when the store closes at 6 p. m.

That's the night, as everybody knows, when Santa can't possibly be hanging around five-and-dime stores. There's too much doing in chimneys all over the county, Jenkins explains, and some folks have even made special family arrangements with the jolly gent for that big evening.

Jenkins will be glad to accept all such requests and see that the fine fellow in the big red coat gets each and every one of them. "Already," Jenkins warned, "his list is crowded—but of course he'll be around anyway, if you know what I mean."

• • •

FROM THAT early arrangement with the local Chamber of Commerce Santa continued to feature the pre-Christmas activiy here and about six years ago moved into the five-and-dime. It's been a handy gathering spot ever since.

Ranging from tots hardly able to toddle up to boys and girls in their early teens, children from all over the county these days have been whispering their wishes as fast as the big man can stoop over to listen to them.

"All right, sweetheart" or "All right there, young fellow," the world's annual favorite chuckles at the end of each chat. And the line moves on, bright with the faces of those who waited all year for this one big chance—and grabbed it, along with the candy.

"Many children don't depend on their memory," Santa's friend explained. "They write lists of their own, or have others do it for them and bring it in to make sure everything's noted.

"In the way of toys, the children ask Santa for many things—but probably bikes, cowboy suits, beebee guns, ironing boards and dollies lead the lot of them."

Even as Jenkins spoke a little girl tugged at Santa's pant-leg and said:

"I want two dogs and a ukelele!"

"See what I mean?" Jenkins laughed. "This Santa fellow has to be able to get them all!"

• • •

JENKINS EVEN recalls one particular case Santa told him about when a little girl confided her sister's colt was "going to have a pony" and she wanted a saddle—just to be sure of getting off to a fast start. Advance planning of this sort would be too much for a lot of men, but Santa is able to do lots of things even daddies can't accomplish.

For example, in addition to being at Pickaway County Children's Home and many other places on the nights just before Christmas—including the store on Monday and Tuesday—Santa travels around the local area to let the children know he's in town; and probably to measure his width against the chimneys at the same time. There have been cases, Jenkins said, when the chimney was too narrow or even missing altogether.

In which case, a little advance checking is needed so Santa will know how to get in the door, through a window or by way of the roof. All of which comes under the heading of secret information, of course, since Santa isn't about to tip off how he gets around—even to his pals who might ask him for the information when they see him.

Meanwhile, at the downtown store, the children who have come to know one of life's finest dreams are still waiting for their chance to see the great man.

They come as the neat and clean, the soiled and frayed, the small, the tall, the confident—and even the bashful ones who smile at the floor while whispering the toys they want "mostest."

They come, in fact, as a miniature cross-section of the county and the nation, but in one priceless quality they are bound alike when they shake the hand of Jenkins' good friend, Santa Claus.

In their hearts—at least for that one fleeting moment—is pure happiness based on a full faith in the grown-up world that moves around them. And even for Santa Claus that should convey a tremendous and everlasting responsibility.

Famed Painting Is Hit Stamp

FRANKFURT, Germany (AP)—An Italian masterpiece that is the best known painting in France's Louvre has become West Germany's most popular postage stamp.

Last April postal authorities here issued a 20-pfennig stamp bearing an excellent color reproduction of Leonardo Da Vinci's "Mona Lisa." It was a commemorative issue on the 500th anniversary of the Italian master's birth.

The new stamp caught on at once with philatelists anl already more than a million have been printed. German postal authorities say that collectors throughout the world have written for stamps. England is the biggest customer. There is no limit on the issue and Mona Lisa stamps will be printed according to demand.

Farm Business Expensive Work In Starting Out

Many young men face a greater problem in getting capital to start farming than in making a profit of farming.

Farming is big business and a $76,000 investment is required to operate a 200-acre farm in Ohio.

Returns on a typical, well-operated, western Ohio farm in 1951 would support a land value of about $300 per acre. A 200-acre unit would cost $60,000.

Replacement value of machinery was estimated at $11,000. Livestock and operating capital came to $5,000, making a total investment of $76,000. The farm from which the figures were collected was classified as "cash crop and grain with some livestock."

• • •

AT PRESENT income with good management farmers on units such as this can show a profit.

The problem facing many young men today is not making such a unit profitable, but of securing capital to get started in the farming business.

Farm land and buildings in the United States at present are estimated to be worth $96 billion Last January, the value was about $86 billion, compared to $76 billion at the beginning of the Korean war.

The 28 percent increase in about 2½ years shows the growing investment farmers have in their business.

Thieves Wearing Stripes At Work

BUTTE, Mont.—(AP) — Tavern occupants here thought they were collectively starting to see things as bad as pink elephants when thieves locked them in a rest room after relieving them of $300 to $400.

But after a few excited minutes of conjecture they agreed that the thieves all were dressed in striped overalls.

Santa Claus Cramming His Pack With Toys For Atomic Age Kids

By JEROME DREYER
Central Press Staff Writer

NEW YORK—Santa Claus follows the line that the customer is always right.

So, aiming to please all of the small fry this Christmas season, he is cramming his pack of toys with the favorites of the past along with creations of this Atomic Age.

And there's good news for the assistant Santas, too, according to Norman Wintermantel, president of the Toy Manufacturers of the United States, who declares that, despite the extra play value and quality in this year's $400 million (manufacturers' value) crop of toys, prices are slightly lower than last year's.

Enthusiasm for wild west toys and dress still prevails, but there is a trend toward space-travel gadgets. This year's well-dressed space traveler will carry a space water pistol — 500 shots without refilling —and will wear a Flash Gordon space suit with a radio-antenna hat and magic one-way glasses.

* * *

HIS SPACE phone will permit conversations at a range of half a mile. Finishing his gear will be a space platform with rocket launcher which, in imagination, will get him off to the "wild blue yonder."

Research among children has revealed that they, like adults, are interested in collecting antiques. This has resulted in a new line of toys in the form of old-time furniture and vehicles in miniature.

Some of these are authentic models of the surrey with the fringe on top, prairie schooners, the early Fords and Stanley Steamers, and complete bedroom sets in early Colonial style complete with an heirloom quilt.

Dolls are more nearly human than ever before. Among the new ones are ingenious creations whose legs move naturally when their arms are held — without a winding device. Others have heart beat mechanisms or drink and burp just like real babies. Still others talk in foreign language via an electronic device.

Another group of dolls, with the latest in style-right hairdos, encourages juvenile interest in grooming.

One model has real hair set in the scalp so it can be washed, combed and set without coming loose. Another's hair appears to grow from a short bob to a waist-length abundance through a winding device concealed in the doll's head.

The ambitious or career-minded child has a wide selection in the new offerings. Aspiring interior decorators can play with a three-dimensional doll house kit and garage which comes ready to assemble, color and furnish with furniture, wall paper, dolls and household pets.

There is a new thrill for the young architect in the modernistic interlocking wooden blocks for constructing the United Nations building and other streamlined structures.

* * *

YOUTHFUL scientists interested in atomic energy can experiment with a small nuclear energy gadget in which the disintegration of atomic particles can be viewed racing at speeds of more than 10,000 miles a second.

Requests for more farm toys have brought a variety of barn sets complete with hog pens, milking enclosures, large silos and a full complement of streamlined agricultural equipment.

For train enthusiasts new accessories include a man putting barrels on a moving belt, which deposits them in a freight car, a switch tower from which a man emerges to flag down motorists, and a two-man hand car with electrically-powered animated figures.

Bits of broken glass, too small to sweep up, may be picked up by blotting the area with damp paper toweling. Glass splinters will quickly adhere to this.

Home Gardeners Can Help Fight Jap Beetles

A possible heavy infestation of Japanese beetles next year might be lightened if home gardeners would follow recommended control measures.

Many gardeners could improve their attempts to get rid of the pests. Failure to use sufficient amounts of insecticides contributes to the lack of control.

Measuring the area to be treated and weighing the materials are more likely to give a gardener positive control of the beetles.

Beetles now can be found in more than 100 areas in Ohio. Eight of these areas are badly infested. More than 2,250 acres in the state are affected.

Better control of beetles in these regions with newer insecticides would help to prevent their spread to non-infested regions.

* *

EXPERIMENTS conducted showed DDT and chlordane much more persistent in soil than lead arsenate. Insecticides sprayed on the soil at the rate of 10 pounds actual chlordane or 25 pounds actual DDT per acre were found to be effective for seven to eight years.

Such insecticides are available in emulsified form and may be applied with little bother. Home gardeners may even use a sprinkling can for applying the insecticide.

Here's a dressed-up version of tomato soup. Into the contents of one can of soup, blend ½ cup sour cream. Add ¾ cup water. If desired, add one or two tablespoons sherry flavoring.

Largest Turbine Is Authorized

NEW YORK—(AP)—The Tennessee Valley Authority has authorized contracts for construction of the largest electric motor and reversible pump turbine in the world for installation at the Hiwassee Dam in Southwestern North Carolina. It is scheduled for completion in 1955.

The reversible pump turbine will operate as a turbine in one direction and as a pump in the other.

The electric motor will serve as a generator for the turbine operation and as a motor for the pump. When motor-driven, the unit will be able to pump 3.3 billion gallons of water a day. This is three times the quantity used each day by the city of New York.

Santa Claus Making His Home In Ohio, Not At The North Pole

By CENTRAL PRESS

CINCINNATI, — Most people will insist Santa Claus lives at the North Pole.

Not so with the children—and the grownups — of Cincinnati, who claim that Santa lives in Rossmoyne, just 12 miles north of here.

And right they might be, for the man they all claim to be Santa Claus looks like him, acts like him, and even works in a toy factory.

The man's name is Everett E. Cook, a hefty 230-pounder with a merry grin who likes to put on his bright red suit, wig and whiskers.

* * *

FOR THE last five years, Cook has been popping in and out of Christmas parties sponsored by fraternal organizations or friends and spreading Christmas cheer to small fry. Although he was opposed to the idea at first, Cook wouldn't miss a chance to play Santa Claus, no matter what the circumstance.

It all started by accident in 1947. The people in the toy plant where he works were making plans for the annual Christmas party for the employes.

Plans were going along well until somebody suggested that it would really be a bang-up party, except that Santa Claus wouldn't be there.

A hurried survey of available people by the committee in charge of arrangements for the party, and Cook was nominated to play the role of the famous gentleman with the gift-full pack on his back.

He was reluctant to act the role, but he finally agreed to rent a costume and be the gift-giver.

When it came time for gifts to be handed out, Cook had a surprise for the people at the party. When they gathered around for their gifts, he announced that only those who would sit on his lap and quietly tell about their Christmas wishes would receive their presents.

Even the president of the Model Toy company, Charley Doepke, had to crawl up on Cook's lap and whisper what he wanted for Christmas.

Cook had so much fun that Christmas that he coaxed his wife into making a Santa Claus suit for him. To go along with the outfit, he bought a wig and whiskers.

* * *

FROM THEN on he was a full-time Santa Claus during the holiday season, complete with his background as a toy maker at the Model toy plant, the hefty build, and the hearty, happy manner, and the bright red suit.

Since his first appearance as Santa Claus, Cook has assumed the garb more than 70 times, always free, to be the gift giver whenever he is asked.

Cook, who devotes most of his free hours during the holidays to playing Santa Claus, says he would never miss a chance to play the role, no matter what the occasion and the time it would take.

Give it up? Not on his life! Cook claims more fun than the children, and, knowing how they feel about Santa Claus, that's a lot of fun.

'Silent Night' Born In Beauty Matching Its Own Simplicity

By Central Press

High in the Austrian Alps, in the region known as the Tyrol—"the land of the mountains"—is to be found the birthplace of "Silent Night, Holy Night."

Here, the towering Tyrolean peaks, centuries-old and famed for their snow-capped grandeur, rise in lofty simplicity into the cool, clear air, guarding smiling, peaceful valleys.

Far up in these Alpine mountains, where love of music is nature's gift to every child, nestles the town of Oberndorf, Austria.

Here in 1818 lived a devout young Austrian priest named Father Joseph Mohr. With his friend, the village schoolmaster and church organist, Franz Gruber, he was destined to give the world this most famous of all Christmas hymns.

• • •

THE TWO men, both lovers of great music, had often talked of the fact that "the perfect Christmas song had not yet been found." Thinking about it, Mohr sat in his church study on Christmas Eve, 1818. Outside, the hushed silence of the night heightened the snow-covered beauty and stillness of the mountain scene.

The purity and calmness of the high peaks filled his heart with radiant joy as he recalled those first Christmas tidings, "Jesus, The Saviour is born." And the thoughts that had been long forming in his mind suddenly found musical expression in the song which we have come since to know and love as "Silent Night, Holy Night."

The next morning, Christmas Day, Mohr hurried to his friend's home with the manuscript of his precious song. Gruber read it intently and exclaimed, "Friend Mohr, you have found it — the right song—God be praised!"

Gruber, thrilled with the spirit of his friend's verses, set to work to compose the perfect melody for "the perfect song."

Finally, the soft, flowing air we now use came to him. "It sings itself, your song," he cried to the delighted priest. Gruber's real contribution to music lies in the beauty and simplicity of the tune, in its perfect blending with Mohr's verses.

The two men sang the new hymn together, to have it ready for the church devotions that night.

Later in the evening, when the villagers were gathered in the gray little mount church, Mohr and Gruber sang their Christmas song before its first audience.

It touched the listeners deeply, and, after the service, they thanked the two friends with tears of joy in their eyes. A new hymn had been born.

The story of how the song spread from its mountain home in the Tyrol to become one of the Christmas favorites in all parts of the world is an enchanting one. Only very slowly did it come into fame. For nearly a year after its first rendition, the song lay almost forgotten in Gruber's desk.

• • •

THEN, IN November, 1819, the church organ had to be repaired, and the repair man, when he had finished with his work, asked Gruber to play something to test the organ.

The beautiful melody of "Silent Night" came back to Gruber's mind and he played it with all its powerful, yet simple, beauty. So entranced was the organ-builder that he begged to take a copy of the song home with him to his own town across the mountains.

From one music-lover to another the hymn was passed on, till it was without a name and was known simply as "The Tyrolese Song," because it had first come from the Tyrolean Alps. With that title it was printed in 1842 for the first time, 24 years after it had been composed!

From that time on, the song has been put into countless other languages and carried to all parts of the world to become the best loved of all Christmas songs and hymns. It touches a heartfelt need, and to all who hear it, it brings the Saviour's calm and peace in its strains of beauty and joy!

Here's a recipe that calls for left-over mashed potatoes. Mix sliced cooked frankfurters with prepared mustard. Place on sauerkraut in the bottom of a deep casserole Cover with last night's mashed potatoes. Place bits of butter, margarine or bacon drippings on the top and heat in moderate oven until potato topping is browned.

Christmas Story From Revised Bible

(EDITOR'S NOTE: Here is the Christmas story told in the new revised Standard Version of the Bible.)

In those days a decree went out from Caesar Augustus that all the world should be enrolled. This was the first enrollment, when Quirinius was governor of Syria And all went to be enrolled, each to his own city. And Joseph also went up from Galilee, from the city of Nazareth, to Judea, to the city of David, which is called Bethlehem, because he was of the house and lineage of David, to be enrolled with Mary, his betrothed, who was with child. And while they were there, the time came for her to be delivered. And she gave birth to her first-born son and wrapped him in swaddling cloths, and laid him in a manger, because there was no place for them in the inn.

And in that region there were shepherds out in the field, keeping watch over their flock by night. And an angel of the Lord appeared to them, and the glory of the Lord shone around them, and they were filled with fear. And the angel said to them, "Be not afraid; for behold, I bring you good news of a great joy which will come to all the people; for to you is born this day in the city of David a Savior, who is Christ the Lord. And this will be a sign for you: you will find a babe wrapped in swaddling cloths and lying in a manger." And suddenly there was with the angel a multitude of the heavenly host praising God and saying,

"Glory to God in the highest,

"and on earth peace among men with whom he is pleased!"

When the angels went away from them into heaven, the shepherds said to one another, "Let us go over to Bethlehem and see this thing that has happened, which the Lord has made known to us." And they went with haste, and found Mary and Joseph and the babe lying in a manger.

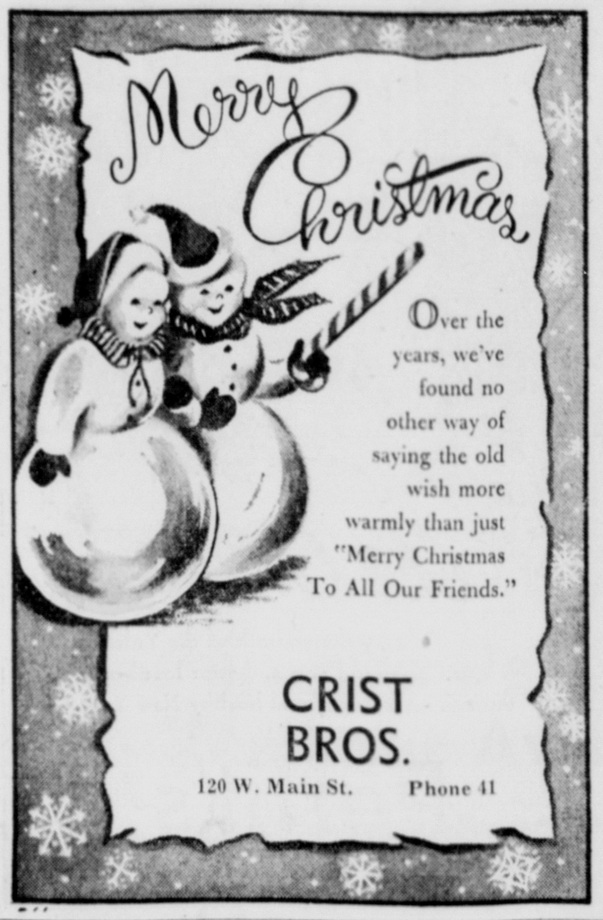

After leather gloves are washed, roll in a turkish towel from finger tips toward the cuff. Knead for a few minutes, then unroll and blow into the fingers to shape them properly. Hang over a towel rod to dry, away from heat. While still damp, soften the leather with the fingers, working very gently.

Caution Urged On America's Get-Together Holiday

Last Yuletime Resulted In 351 Deaths

Four-Day Vacation For Many Means Heavy Traffic

It's not always fair weather when families got together, so drive carefully on your Christmas trip.

The National Safety Council warns that Christmas is America's family get-together holiday.

That means a lot of travel under hazardous conditions of poor visibility and treacherous road surfaces. That's why the death toll from traffic accidents is greater at Christmas time than for any other holiday of the year.

Heavy travel, tricky weather, early darkness and holiday festivity combined to bring death to 351 persons during the four-day Christmas holiday last year, the Council said.

• • •

MANY PERSONS again will enjoy a four-day holiday this year—long enough to tempt millions of motorists to drive considerable distances for the rendezvous with Santa Claus and a turkey dinner.

"Our records show the traffic death toll for Christmas eve and Christmas day is about twice the annual daily average," says Ned H. Dearborn, Council president. "This calls for special caution on everybody's part—driver and pedestrian alike.

"To keep death from taking your holiday, or someone else's is a simple thing. All that is required is extra caution and courtesy, plus a little more time to be extra careful when driving on the highway or crossing streets.

"If you're walking, watch for traffic—and wait for the green light before crossing streets. Carry packages so they do not obstruct your view. Motorists cannot always see you, especially during early evening darkness.

"If you're driving, start early and take it easy. Be extremely cautious in bad weather and darkness.

'If you imbibe Christmas spirit in liquid form, stay away from the steering wheel of a car. Don't let holiday spirit—or spirits — replace common sense and caution.

"Assume personal responsibility for a safe celebration for yourself and others. Make Christmas happy for everyone.

"Don't let death take your holiday."

Raw Garbage Blamed For Hog Disease

Vesicular exanthema disease among hogs is still on the loose despite drastic control measures in many areas. Quarantines have been slapped on nine counties in five states.

Cause of the continued spread of VE in this:

"Nothing has been done to check the disease at its source. That source is raw garbage.

"There's no way to police every garbage feedyard in the country. Some big feeders sell hogs every market day. When VE is diagnosed in a garbage fed herd, chances are good that affected hogs already have passed through slaughter plants and the fresh pork is on its way to consumers.

• • •

"HOUSEWIVES or hotel cooks throw raw meat rinds and bones from these undetected VE animals into garbage cans, and the disease is on its way to new herds."

The U.S. Livestock Sanitary Association recently emphasized the importance of stopping the feeding of uncooked garbage to hogs. Members of the association were generally agreed that such feeding practices should have been stopped before the disease jumped the California state line and spread to 29 other states in five months.

Recently, quarantines were lifted in three states after strong control measures were enforced. But the raw garbage problem remains.

Raw meat in garbage spreads hog cholera and trichinosis as well as VE. Trichinosis is dangerous to human health. VE is not.

MERRY CHRISTMAS

May you have a joyous day — with many blessings to come your way!

German Bible Dating 1832 Included In Collection Here

Memories will reach back over the years in Pickaway County when the whistles and bells salute the passing of Old 1952, but even the oldest residents won't be able to recall many events traced through a collection of Bibles owned by Dave Walters of Circleville.

Walters, who lives at 111½ E. Water St., has a valuable collection, including one of the oldest Bibles in the county—printed in German and carrying an 1832 copyright mark.

Walters said he knows of one older Bible in Circleville and added he hopes eventually to obtain it.

"It's been promised to me when certain developments come to pass," he said, "but even so I may not be able to get it."

He declined to give the name of the present owner.

• • •

WALTERS SAID the Bible referred to has written entries dating back to the 18th century. Entries made to maintain family histories, he explained, are among the most interesting details to be found in the old Bibles.

His Bible collecting hobby began about five years ago, Walters recalled, and he began it only because Circleville's Trinity Lutheran church had three or four that were to be discarded. His prized 1832 Bible was one of those he obtained at that time from the church pulpit.

Walters said it had been used by the father of the Rev. G. L. Troutman, present pastor of Trinity Lutheran.

The Walters collection now includes about 23 Bibles, several of them printed in German. Many of them are beautiful examples of workmanship and all are bound in leather.

"A cupboard that my wife would like to use for clothes is full of Bibles," he laughed.

Walters has never estimated total value of his Bibles, but agreed they "hold a lot of memories for a lot of people," many of them forgotten to the community and now listed only on the family record pages. Such records frequently trace families back many generations.

• • •

"IN FACT, it's surprising that so many people are willing to give the Bibles up," he said. "Even aside from the satisfaction of having the collection, I find I read the Bibles much oftener because of it—looking through the old books and reading the many notations made for the family histories."

Added to the interest in the Bibles themselves and the family data they usually contain, Walters said he has always enjoyed reading cards, memo slips and forgotten bookmarks in a Bible newly added to his collection.

Between the pages of one he found one of the earliest copies of a Columbus newspaper. And, in another, a school report card told of progress for a pupil who had studied readin', writin' and 'rithmetic "back around 1838 or 1840."

Walters has noticed one important change in the Bibles of modern times.

He said the old Bibles almost without exception included a page for the Temperance Pledge.

"Members of the family would sign the pledge," he said, "and abided by it. But somehow, in a lot of Bibles nowadays, the pledge page isn't included."

At Christmas

May the warmth of the Yuletide spirit surround you and your loved ones throughout a bright and healthy New Year.

Sunken Warship To Be Salvaged

SINGAPORE — (AP) — A salvage company has raised the barnacle and mud-covered hulk of the Japanese ship, Zenya Maru, off Singapore.

The wreck has a large hole in its side big enough to hold three three-ton trucks, Capt. W. A. Doust, general manager of the salvage firm, said. No records exist as to how it was destroyed during the war. The ship will be broken up here and its steel used for building construction.

Prices Steady

Prices farmers receive for products will see no sharp change in 1953, predicted experts at the State-Federal Outlook Conference in Washington, D. C. A Capper's Farmer report on the meeting says farmers received less than a quarter of the $3 billions increase in consumer food bills between 1951 and 1952.

Hormones Used

Virgin heifers and sterile cows can be made to produce milk through the use of sex hormones. Hormones in pellet form are deposited under the skin of the cow's neck. Within four months five tested animals brought into lactation by this method started producing milk. They averaged 350 pounds of butterfat in 10 months and gained an average of 200 pounds in weight.
